Part III

Statement of Program Service Accomplishments

Check if Schedule O contains a response or note to any line in this Part III

1

Briefly describe the organization's mission

Our mission is to conserve and study certain raptors, as well as prevent their extinction. Raptors are among the critical components of our natural world and cultural heritage, and they assist humans in understanding their interdependence with nature and the environment. Through our programs, we seek to advance the knowledge of avian biology, ecology, and conservation through research, training and education. As a result, we seek to improve global environmental health and to conserve biological diversity.

Species Restoration - California Condor - the captive breeding facility in Boise, Idaho produces California Condors for release to the wild to establish self-sustaining populations of this rare species. By 1982, just 22 California Condors remained on Earth. Today there are approximately 460 individual birds, more than half of them flying free in the wild. This year the 14 pairs held by The Peregrine Fund produced 13 fertile eggs and one additional fertile egg was transferred to Boise from the Oregon Zoo. Thirteen chicks hatched in Boise. Seven captive-bred condors were transferred to the Anzona Vermilion Cliffs site for release to the wild and that population now includes 78 individuals. Cooperative programs with state agencies and hunting groups were expanded to encourage the use of lead-free ammunition in condor country. Each year we attempt to trap every condor to be tested and, if necessary, treated for lead poisoning or any other maladies discovered. Raptor Propagation - In 2014, we began a captive population of Eurasian Sparrowhawks (Accipiter nisus) to maintain personnel competency in captive propagation techniques, but more so to obtain skills and knowledge in producing Accipiters in captivity which could be applied to future conservation efforts within this genus. Currently the Peregrine Fund's World Center for Birds of Prey houses seven Eurasian Sparrowhawks (three breeding pairs and one lone male). The Sparrowhawk is of least concern as far as conservation status. However, the genus Accipiter has been produced minimally in captivity when compared to other species of raptors, so developing and publishing techniques will no doubt benefit any future species of concern. We also continue to maintain a captive breeding population of Taita Falcons (Falco fasciatus) for potential future conservation needs of this species which, according to Bird Life International, is a Globally Threatened Species. Currently in the U.S., all Taita Falcons are of the same genetic strain from a handful of falcons brought to the U.S. from Africa in the 1980's. We are currently working with cooperators to obtain more individuals from Africa to diversify our captive population. The Peregrine Fund currently houses 16 Taita Falcons (five breeding pairs and six lone males and females). Finally, we house a single breeding pair of Northern Aplomado Falcons (Falco femoralis septentrionalis). In the event that additional habitat becomes available in South Texas, we may have a small population of suitable offspring for release into the wild.

Conservation Programs - Since founding in 1970, over 100 raptor species in at least 66 countries have benefitted from field research and hands-on recovery efforts by the organization. This year, The Peregrine Fund was involved in raptor research, graduate studies, and conservation projects in 20 countries on five continents. Training and support were provided to 38 students conducting graduate thesis research projects and doctoral and master's studies, all in their native countries, since beginning, 28 students have graduated with PhD degrees and 81 with MSc degrees. We began a student project in Australia for the first time in 2016. This year, 12 pairs of previously released young of the critically endangered Ridgway's Hawk formed territories and eight pairs bred successfully in the wild representing a 100% increase over 2015 in a new population at Puntacana, Dominican Republic, and 25 young were released. Orange-breasted Falcon surveys were conducted at 21 sites for nesting falcons in Belize and Guatemala. Captive-bred and wild-hatched Harpy Eagles were tracked and observed in the forests of Danen, Panama using radio telemetry, and public educational campaigns were conducted to reduce shooting of this threatened species. Nine graduate students were supported in Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Bolivia and Ecuador, and one graduated with a PhD degree and one with an MSc degree. Seven students conducted field studies for graduate or post-graduate degrees benefitting raptor conservation in Kenya and understanding of Eleonora's Falcon migration. In Madagascar, work continued to solidify conservation of globally significant wetlands and forests that were declared, in 2015, as permanently protected by three community-based conservation areas. We monitored rare and endangered raptor species, assisted captive breeding of critically endangered species, supported 16 graduate students' studies, and worked with local communities to develop new income sources while protecting traditional customs and practices. Financial, scientific and technical support was given to the Philippine Eagle Foundation for work including captive breeding and release of Philippine Eagles, public education, conservation of critical habitat, and telemetry studies on wild eagles. Annual breeding population surveys of critically endangered Gyps vultures were completed in India and Nepal that revealed stabilizing populations after the catastrophic declines recorded due to the use of veterinary diclofenac in livestock. A symposium on the impact on raptors of wind power generation was convened at the annual meeting of the Raptor Research Foundation, and several key presentations were given at the annual meetings of the Wilson Ornithological Society and the American Ornithologists Union, among others. The American Kestrel Partnership was expanded to understand the species' decline on a continental scale. The third season of study to understand how the Gyrfalcon responds to impacts of climate change was completed in Alaska. Aplomado Falcon surveys found 38 pairs in South Texas and a total of 51 young were produced in the wild.

Education / Information - The Education Program at The Peregrine Fund's World Center for Birds of Prey provides cultural and educational opportunities to the greater Treasure Valley, Idaho, and beyond. With a growing population, complicated land use patterns, and the need to increase the public's awareness of natural systems, we provide information for students and individuals to make wise decisions and have a positive impact on our environment. In FY2016 we hosted 39,893 visitors at our Interpretive Center. Attendance at our October Fall Flights shows was over 3,800 people. We also continued our school-endorsed programs, which we offer free of charge to all students and teachers. These programs have been designed by educators and biologists to make science both accessible and exciting, while meeting school curricular standards. In 2016 we hosted 4,002 students, and reached another 7,068 people through off-site educational programming. Calendars, annual reports, news releases, brochures and other materials are updated annually and made available to the public. Raptors at Risk, The Peregrine Fund's international joined photographic exhibition, attracts more than 400 raptor photos from entrants in at least a dozen countries each year. Accepted entries are viewed by thousands of followers on the organization website and social media. The Peregrine Fund's online audience logged about 173,289 page views of our webcams trained on Peregrine Falcons and American Kestrels that show them courting, nesting, and raising young each spring. For users seeking more technical information, our online Global Raptor Information Network presented academic species accounts and bibliographies of published works on 333 diurnal raptor species, maintained 480 participant home pages and synthesized data from over 100 different journals. Research materials may be requested from The Peregrine Fund's research library, this year staff supplied 600+ articles to more than 260 researchers worldwide free of charge. Visitors to the Archives of Falconry learn about the role of falcons in raptor conservation and habitat protection. The website provides tools to become a member, subscribe to e-newsletters, shop for raptor-related merchandise, and track donations. The organization has 108,500 followers on its 5 Facebook pages and nearly 4,000 followers on Twitter.

Return Reference	Explanation
Schedule D, Part III, Line 4	The Archives of Falconry functions within The Peregrine Fund's educational as well as its research programs included in the mission statement. The worldwide cultural heritage of falconry extends back over 4,000 years. It was that sport's history and interaction with raptors that led modern practitioners to found and establish The Peregrine Fund to restore endangered populations of birds of prey, starting with the Peregrine Falcon. Their successes in rescuing that and subsequent species have been due in large part to the intimate insight and personal understanding derived from their relationships with these birds through their practice of falconry. While such falconers' interactions and relationships have been documented for hundreds of years, this valuable history was being lost due to the absence of any focused effort to preserve records of falconers and their key roles in raptor conservation. For over a quarter of a century The Archives of Falconry, founded by The Peregrine Fund and unique in the world, has been devoted to the preservation of that historical record.

Return Reference	Explanation
Schedule J, Part I, Line 1a	Companion Travel - on occasion, travel expenses are paid for the President's spouse when it is for a bona fide business purpose. This occurs when an additional person is needed when traveling with a bird and an employee or other volunteer is not available, or when the spouse is participating in development activities and is an integral part of the meetings held, serving as a volunteer development staff member. Because these are bona fide business expenses, it is not a taxable benefit to the President. If neither of those cases applies, spousal travel is not paid for by The Peregrine Fund. Housing Allowance - the President received a housing allowance that is included on the W-2 as taxable income as per the salary agreement negotiated and approved by the Board of Directors.
Schedule J, Part I, Line 1b	Companion Travel - there is no written agreement regarding reimbursement of spousal travel expenses. Spousal travel is only paid for when it is determined to be a bona fide business expense after discussion between the President, Accountant and Bookkeeper. Housing Allowance - is per a written agreement negotiated and approved by the Board of Directors.
Schedule J, Part I, Line 3	Prior to the meeting of the Compensation Committee, the President provides the Chairperson of the committee with an evaluation of the officers under him and a summary of his own activities for the year. The President at that time recommends compensation for the vice president and makes recommendations for the committee to consider for himself. When the committee meets, the President is in attendance at the beginning of the meeting to answer questions and provide a verbal report of the activities and accomplishments of himself and the vice president during the previous year. He is then excused and the Compensation Committee meets to decide on compensation to propose to the entire Board for the officers. During the meeting of the full Board, at the conclusion of the regular business the Board goes into a closed session to consider the report of the Compensation Committee. A vote is taken and thus the salaries of officers are established for the upcoming year. The Chairperson of the Compensation Committee provides written minutes of the meeting for the files. When the President makes his recommendations he takes into consideration (1) job performance during the previous year, (2) professional qualifications, (3) experience, (4) cost of living increase/decrease, (5) compensation provided by comparable organizations, and (6) the overall budget for the upcoming year and whether increases in compensation are possible. Members of the Compensation Committee verify that compensation for officers of The Peregrine Fund is in line.

990 Schedule O, Supplemental Information

Return Reference	Explanation
Form 990, Part VI, Section B, Line 11b	The form 990 is prepared in-house by the Accountant. It is then reviewed by the President, Vice-President, and Director of Operations. The draft version of the 990 is e-mailed or sent by US Postal Service to all board members who are given an opportunity to comment before the return is filed with the IRS.
Form 990, Part VI, Section B, Line 12c	Each director, principal officer, and member of a committee with governing board-designated powers annually signs a statement in which affirms they have received a copy of the Conflict of Interest Policy, have read and understand the policy, have agreed to comply with the policy, and understand The Peregrine Fund is charitable and in order to maintain its federal tax exemption it must engage primarily in activities which accomplish one or more of its tax-exempt purposes. To ensure The Peregrine Fund operates in a manner consistent with charitable purposes and does not engage in activities that could jeopardize its tax-exempt status, periodic reviews are conducted. The reviews include whether compensation arrangements and benefits are reasonable based on competent survey information and the result of arm's length bargaining and whether partnerships, joint ventures, and arrangements with management organizations conform to the Organization's written policies, are properly recorded, reflect reasonable investment or payments for goods and services, further charitable purposes and do not result in inurement, impermissible private benefit, or in an excess benefit transaction.

Return Reference	Explanation
Form 990, Part VI, Section B, Line 15	Prior to the meeting of the Compensation Committee, the President provides the Chairperson of the committee with an evaluation of the officers under him and a summary of his own activities for the year. The President at that time recommends compensation for the vice president and makes recommendations for the committee to consider for himself. When the committee meets, the President is in attendance at the beginning of the meeting to answer questions and provide a verbal report of the activities and accomplishments of himself and the vice president during the previous year. He is then excused and the Compensation Committee meets to decide on compensation to propose to the entire Board for the officers. During the meeting of the full Board, at the conclusion of the regular business the Board goes into a closed session to consider the report of the Compensation Committee. A vote is taken and thus the salaries of officers are established for the upcoming year. The Chairperson of the Compensation Committee provides written minutes of the meeting for the files. When the President makes his recommendations he takes into consideration (1) job performance during the previous year, (2) professional qualifications, (3) experience, (4) cost of living increase/decrease, (5) compensation provided by comparable organizations, and (6) the overall budget for the upcoming year and whether increases in compensation are possible. Members of the Compensation Committee verify that compensation for officers of The Peregrine Fund is in line.
