	The organization's focus is to improve community healthcare access and quality while containing costs in a preventative manner. In 2016, more than 35 health benefits education opportunities were provided for employers and other community stakeholders. These occurred through in-person meetings and webinar programs. Education opportunities included topics such as the health care under a new administration, specialty drug management, primary care health services, wellness programs and the Affordable Care Act. In addition, employers participated in benchmarking surveys that included topics such as short-term disability, California State Disability, benefits data management, background checks, high deductible health plans, ethics hotlines and surviving spouse benefits. Hundreds of companies across the country are addressing depression in the workplace through Right Direction, an effort of Employers Health. The free initiative provides turn-key materials to employers to create awareness, reduce stigma and increase help seeking behaviors. More than 17,000 pieces of collateral have been downloaded for use since its inception.
