Return Reference	Explanation
Form 990, Part III, Line 4a, Program Services	In 2016, a few program services included START, in collaboration with Asia-based partners, implemented the second round of the Pan-Asia Risk Reduction (PARR) Fellowship program for 9 early-career researchers, policy-makers and practitioners in Asia. The integrative fellowship program involved training and network building activities, project follow-on grants, and expert-led subject matter courses. START is partnered with the University of Cape Town, Stockholm Environment Institute, the Red Cross/Red Crescent Climate Center and others to advance understanding of the water-energy-climate nexus in six Southern African cities. This effort, under the Future Resilience for African Cities And Lands (FRACTAL) project, features city 'learning labs' and embedding of researchers in city government institutions, which are aimed at promoting exploration of the urban decision space and better understanding of how climate information can contribute to urban planning at decadal time scales. START's role in this project is to support opportunities for cross-city learning between city-based research groups and urban planners. The African Climate Change Fellowship Program (ACCFP) program promotes innovative adaptation research in Africa. ACCFP offers experiential learning, education, and research and training opportunities to African professionals, researchers and graduate students to build their capabilities for advancing and applying knowledge for climate change adaptation in Africa. Ten fellows attended a 2016 Advanced Institute training in Tanzania on climate change adaptation in four key areas: 1) climate change and gender, 2) climate change and water, 3) climate change and green growth, and 4) the economics of climate adaptation. ACCFP continues to be a sought-after fellowship program with a reputation for tremendous learning and career growth. Several ACCFP alumni from past years have returned as experts in their fields to train these new ACCFP fellows. START is a partner in the Adaptation at Scale in Semi-Arid Regions (ASSAR) project under the IDRC-funded CARIIA initiative. START promotes capacity development in this 5-year project that will include gender training, as well as training workshops to develop innovative communications for sharing findings from research in Africa and Asia. START is partnering with the University of Ghana and ICRISAT Mali to advance understanding of barriers to and enablers of climate change adaptation in northern Ghana and southern Mali, through the lenses of governance, social differentiated vulnerabilities and ecosystem services. The research focuses on agricultural intensification processes that can create a more enabling environment for better adapting to climate change through the factors that drive intensification, such as access to credit, services, inputs, markets, equipment, infrastructure, and enabling policies. START coordinates capacity building efforts within Global Observation of Forest Cover and Land Dynamics (GO
