Gary and Mary West Health Policy Center, Inc. Summary of Direct Charitable Activities Form 990-PF, Part IX-A

Americans are living longer and better than ever before thanks to major medical and public health advances, and greater access to healthcare. However, as our population ages and grows, we face significant challenges to living out our years in the best way possible. We are in the midst of one of the largest demographic shifts in U.S. history as Baby Boomers turn 65 at the rate of 10,000 a day. This is already having a major impact on our healthcare system and community-based services, which are not scaled or structured to meet the demands, needs and expectations of seniors and their families to enable them to successfully "age in place" by remaining in their homes and communities.

In 2016, the Gary and Mary West Health Policy Center, Inc. ("WHPC") continued to be singularly focused on achievement of the mission to enable seniors to successfully age in place and is strategically aligned to the Gary and Mary West Foundation and the Gary and Mary West Health Institute in its efforts. The WHPC focused on researching policies in both acute and chronic care settings, as well as long-term services and supports, which improve access to care and enhance the quality of life for seniors, especially those who have low incomes. These policies delve into the appropriate site of care, scope of practice issues and payment reforms which incentivize the increased use of care coordination and utilization of community-based and other integrated services, such as providing oral care, which deliver better outcomes for seniors in the place they prefer.

CONTINUING (OR ONGOING) ACTIVITIES:

SUCCESSFUL AGING

WHPC's overall focus in 2016 was to continue to identify and advance policies which support the organizational mission of Successful Aging, which is enabling seniors to age in place with access to high-quality health and support services that preserve and protect one's dignity, quality of life and independence.

WHPC was focused on advancing senior-appropriate acute and chronic care payment models, and long-term services and supports, which fuel independence. Key areas of focus included: Geriatric Emergency Care, Home-Based Primary Care, Oral Healthcare and Care Coordination, Palliative Care, and Caregivers. These payment policies are developed based on scalable and sustainable home- and community-based healthcare delivery models backed by the West Health Institute's research collaborations which are designed to study and validate their effectiveness.

HOME-BASED PRIMARY CARE

WHPC continues to focus on advancing policies to manage chronic conditions through the delivery of home-based primary care for the frail elderly. Specifically, the WHPC is researching ways to more effectively utilize primary care providers and care coordination teams to meet the goal of maximizing healthcare outcomes for frail elderly Medicare patients living with chronic conditions. This is a small, often underrepresented population in the U.S., which are some of Medicare's most complex patients. This group accounts for only five percent of the Medicare population, but drives almost 50 percent of its costs. This population suffers from multiple comorbidities and are largely homebound. As a result, they are often not able to receive care on a regular basis and their conditions may go untreated, becoming progressively worse. Eventually a trip to the emergency room and/or a hospital stay often results, and with continued exacerbation of their conditions, those trips can become more frequent. Rather than living out their life in the comfort and dignity of their home, many of these patients end up at the most expensive locations, including emergency departments and hospitals. This often results in more costly interventions and worse outcomes.

The WHPC research in this area involved an in-depth review of MedStar Health's (not-for-profit health system in Washington, DC) nationally-recognized Medical House Call Practice (MHCP) model to identify the key levers that will catalyze the growth of home-based primary care for the frail elderly. MHCP has been providing longitudinal and coordinated care to frail elders in the D.C. metropolitan area for the past 15 years. They proactively monitor and manage their patients' health, which helps prevent acute events, emergency department visits and hospitalizations. Most importantly, the care plans are tailored to each patient's unique needs.

The WHPC's efforts specifically targeted an understanding of the factors that impact scaling, spreading, and sustaining these models of care and how barriers can be mitigated. MedStar's innovative care model has the potential to bring improved care at a lower cost to those who need it most. The goal is to expand a home-based care program nationwide to bring comprehensive, high-quality care to seniors in their homes, at costs far lower than care provided in hospitals, and transform the way healthcare is delivered for chronically ill patients.

Together, WHPC and MedStar developed a set of processes, tools and services which can help this team of providers efficiently deliver care in a cost- and outcome-optimal manner.

A recent study demonstrated the impact of this program on Medicare spending, showing a 17 percent reduction in costs. It examined a cohort of 722 patients under the care of the medical house calls practice and compared them to a randomly-chosen control group of patients. The results showed this model of care holds a lot of promise — both in terms of cost savings and in helping the frail elderly successfully receive care in their home, where they are the most comfortable. WHPC continues to engage with the home-based care practices and CMS to further analyze methodology and results from the model's demonstration sites to inform scalable policies.

LONG-TERM SERVICES AND SUPPORTS

Begun in May of 2015 and continuing in 2016, the WHPC engaged in a research project with the Center for Health Care Strategies (and its partners Mathematica Policy Research and Airam Actuarial Consulting) to identify best practices for reimbursement of Medicaid's long-term services and supports (LTSS) programs. The national initiative will gain insights from pilot efforts in eight states: Arizona, Kansas, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and Wisconsin.

Medicaid's LTSS programs provide health-related supportive services for low-income seniors with a focus on helping individuals remain independent in their homes or communities for as long as possible. As the country's largest funder of LTSS, Medicaid covers a flexible set of services including personal assistance with basic daily tasks such as bathing, dressing, toileting and eating, as well as home- and community-based services such as adult day care and, when necessary, nursing home care.

As states grapple with the rising cost of Medicaid, they have increasingly looked to managed care organizations to provide LTSS and coordinate the care of individuals served by the program, typically paying a fixed amount per month for each beneficiary. However, if reimbursement strategies do not address the diverse needs of seniors, it can lead to inadequate care being provided to those who need the most care and excessive payments for those who do not require a high level of assistance.

The eight participating states were chosen for their commitment to using payment strategies to drive improvements in long-term care. Over the next year, key stakeholders from the government, private sector and policy community will join technical experts from CHCS, Mathematica Policy Research, and Airam Actuarial Consulting to help these states test new rate-setting, risk adjustment and data collection approaches for Medicaid managed LTSS (MLTSS) programs.

Participating states will test new or revised rate setting methods over several months. The best practices they identify will be included in a tool kit available to all states. The tool kit will be part of an online resource library to help states at different phases of designing, implementing or administering Medicaid MLTSS programs use rate-setting approaches to drive care improvements for beneficiaries while lowering costs.

WHPC also engaged with the Long-Term Quality Alliance (LTQA) to develop a Shared-Savings Workshop to explore the potential of a 'housing with services' pilot in Massachusetts, partnering with Leading Age and Senior Care Options (SCO) managed care plans. The goal of this workshop is to develop a model for coordinated and appropriately-funded senior housing and health and supportive services. The inspiration for this model is Oregon's Housing and Services program (Cedar Sinai) and Vermont's Support and Services at Home (SASH) program.

CARE COORDINATION IN COMMUNITY-BASED SETTINGS/ORAL HEALTHCARE

The WHPC has focused its attention on a number of important projects in the care coordination, community-based settings and oral healthcare space to address seniors' needs. First, WHPC has helped to shape the development and execution of educational webinars on aging and the importance of access to oral healthcare for seniors. Next, the WHPC completed the Medicare Dental Coverage Survey and published the Supplemental Benefits Survey. Finally, WHPC helped to shape the strategy on advancing access to oral healthcare for low-income seniors. WHPC staff continues to provide input and feedback on research project ideas as well as conduct independent and innovative economic research and analysis, publish thought-provoking educational policy papers and participate in panel discussions on raising awareness of the critical need for care coordination in community-based settings and access to oral care for seniors.

In service of advancing care coordination, the West Health Policy Center has commissioned research with the Center for Connected Health Policy to determine the opportunities presented through the deployment of telehealth for seniors. Specifically, the research will inform payment and delivery models which enable aging-in-place policies from which seniors can derive improved outcomes, while payers and providers are appropriately incentivized.
