FORM 990, PART III, LINE 4A	Total grants for the sponsorship program were $102.3 million in 2016. At the end of 2016, a total of 310,866 individuals were sponsored through Unbound. They included 281,210 children and youth, 29,379 elders and 277 candidates studying for religious vocations. Sponsored individuals and their families were served through Unbound projects in Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, India, Kenya, Madagascar, Mexico, Nicaragua, Peru, the Philippines, Tanzania, Uganda and Venezuela. Following are examples of achievements in the sponsorship program as Unbound works with individuals and families to break the cycle of poverty. Unbound's sponsorship program helps individuals and their families in 20 countries on a path out of poverty by connecting them with individual sponsors and supportive local communities of staff members and other families. Sponsors, through a monthly financial contribution and letters, experience other cultures, friendship with someone in another part of the world and a practical way to make a lasting difference in the life of a child or elder. Sponsors who travel on Unbound awareness trips may meet their sponsored friends, learn about their lives and see firsthand the difference their support makes. In 2016, 636 people participated in 28 trips in 12 countries. Families participating in the sponsorship program use financial assistance to help with needs like education, nutrition, housing improvements, clothing and health care - in addition to leadership and economic development opportunities such as financial literacy, youth retreats and skill development for parents. Sponsorship requires active participation from families as they take a central role in selecting benefits for their children and building stronger communities. Sponsored individuals and their families partner with Unbound to make program and benefit decisions that help meet their basic needs and develop their potential over the course of their time in the program, sometimes 18 years or more. Outcomes vary by location but typically include education, leadership development, improved health and nutrition status, dignified housing, skill development and increased income through livelihood opportunities for families. Through Unbound's sponsorship program, families have more choices in their lives and are empowered, over time, to create a path out of poverty. Monitoring program success. Monitoring and evaluation of programs. Unbound is committed to learning from our work and ensuring that the work makes a positive impact in the lives of children, families and elders around the world. The organization asks two basic questions to earn donor trust and be at our best for those we work with: 1. Did we do what we said we were going to do? This is program monitoring. 2. Did it make a difference? This is program evaluation. Unbound distinguishes between monitoring and evaluation and maintains separate but compleme

In addition, almost all projects receive at least one visit by headquarters staff every year. Staff members also accompany sponsors on Unbound awareness trips visiting projects and families in the Unbound program. In 2016, headquarters staff spent more than 1,216 total days in the field monitoring and supporting programs. In addition, the organization performs quality checks on letters and photos from sponsored friends to their sponsors, and monitors member retirement rates and sponsor retention rates. Unbound collects educational attendance and performance data and documents the final education level achieved by sponsored members leaving the program. Unbound projects around the world conduct evaluations in their local contexts to determine outcomes for sponsored members and their families. Methods include surveys of sponsored members on income and skill development, focus groups on attitudes and behavioral changes, and interviews to document empowerment. Organization-wide program evaluations focus on four key domains: education, economic status, community participation and empowerment. Empowerment refers to ones ability to make decisions for oneself and act freely in a way that is intentional and goal-oriented.

Examples of program success	Sponsorship helps children achieve a level of education that prepares them to compete with peers for jobs and be educated community members, parents and leaders. At a global level, at the point of leaving the program, 75 percent of sponsored children achieved a level of schooling comparative to or above national peer averages, according to data gathered from 2011-2014. This means that Unbound students - who experience marginalization based on economic, social and geographic factors - were able to compete and excel alongside students from all socioeconomic brackets and areas within their countries. Of these former sponsored children, 51 percent achieved educational levels a year or more above their national peer averages. The number jumped to 59 percent achieving a year or more above their national peer averages when looking at the experience of sponsored girls. This, along with country-level analysis, indicated a specific impact on girls' education and a closing or reversing of the prominent gender gap present in many communities. In Guatemala, for example, sponsored children, on average, achieved almost three years of schooling more than the national average for their peers. And in Unbound's Quezon program in the Philippines, 57 percent of sponsored youth pursued post-secondary education compared to 30 percent of their peers. Sponsorship impacts the sponsored child and the entire family. Unbound's direct work through a personalized benefit model and parent groups means families are able to best allocate resources for their children and direct how the program supports their development as families. As of September 2014, 77 percent of all Unbound sponsored members participated in the program through small groups. These groups provide the space for families to have a voice in the program and be part of a supportive community, addressing two significant components of poverty: lack of choices and isolation. In 2016, a pilot evaluation measuring the empowerment among sponsored mothers in Kampala, Uganda, and Antipolo, Philippines, engaged mothers who are waiting for their children to be sponsored as a comparison group. In this pilot, we found that Unbound sponsored parents in both the Philippines and Uganda displayed a stronger level of ownership of psychological assets - such as happiness, control, goal setting or self-esteem - than the wait-list parents did. We saw strong evidence that the Unbound sponsored parents more often took advantage of the opportunity to make choices for themselves, their families and their communities. This evaluation is being adapted and rolled out on a global scale in 2017. In 2013, Unbound conducted a global evaluation of participation and empowerment indicators across all regions where Unbound works. A random sample of 697 participants revealed that three-fourths of all parents actively decide what their children will receive as benefits and more than 40 percent were creating personal budgets and contributing regularly to

In addition, 90 percent of mothers of sponsored children believe they have the power to change their family's situation, while 70 percent speak up about their ideas and opinions and 63 percent are active in solving problems in their communities, according to data acquired in 2013. Unbound is in the third year of a six-year longitudinal data collection on economic outcomes for sponsored members and their families. The evaluation includes both quantitative and qualitative data and follows families from the time they begin the program. Finally, various project (community) level evaluations are ongoing and led by program staff in each country. The primary purpose of evaluations at the project level is to ensure continuous program improvements and adaptations to the ever-changing world around the program. For example, an evaluation conducted in Santa Ana, El Salvador, in 2016 has led to an increased focus on the empowerment of mothers participating in small groups to increase their self-perception as leaders. A 2016 evaluation in Quezon, Philippines, was conducted to learn the value of a nutritional program so that the project may gradually phase out the food assistance aspect of their program in favor of other benefits without negatively impacting families. A 2016 evaluation in Kampala, Uganda, found that 70 percent of members of small groups participated in saving within their group. Sixty-eight percent of the evaluation respondents stated their motivation for saving was to secure their finances for the future. Feedback from sponsors: Unbound recognizes sponsors and other benefactors not merely as donors but, first and foremost, as highly valued and respected members of the Unbound community. At Unbound, we believe that both sponsors and sponsored persons have something to gain from the sponsorship relationship, and toward that end we are committed to helping sponsors become more aware of the realities of global poverty and grow in human solidarity. We take exceptional care in our communications with sponsors, whether dealing with routine account matters or in the production of publications and web content. We want our sponsors to be well informed about what happens in our programs so that they understand how their contributions are being used and become more invested in the lives of those they help. Feedback we receive from Unbound sponsors testifies to the efficacy of this respectful approach. Surveys of random sponsors conducted over the years consistently reflect high satisfaction with our work. In the most recent survey (spring 2014), 94 percent of respondents agreed or strongly agreed that Unbound's outreach to families living in poverty is effective and 79 percent felt they were treated as partners in that outreach. Unbound maintains a high sponsor retention rate. We ended 2016 with a retention rate of 91 percent. Even those who end their sponsorships (many for financial reasons) generally approve.

FORM 990, PART III, LINE 4B	Following are examples of achievements in education support as Unbound works with students in our service-scholarship program. Education support provided by Unbound's service-scholarship program helps talented older students who, because of economic circumstances, are struggling to continue their educations. The program is based on the principles of perseverance, leadership and service to the community. The service-scholarship program complements the educational support provided by the Unbound sponsorship program, with 48 percent of scholarship students also sponsored. Unbound scholarships have helped students in communities around the world achieve their educational goals. Students are able to complete their educations, follow their chosen career paths and be of service to the larger community. Scholarships are used for needs such as secondary, post-secondary and vocational school tuition, transportation, school supplies and books. Recipients are selected by local program staffs based on economic need, commitment to completing their educations, demonstrated leadership potential and interest in community service. Scholars participate in service projects as a requirement of the program. Scholarships are intended as supplemental assistance, and students and their families contribute what they can toward educational costs. In 2016, scholarship grants to Unbound field offices totaled more than $3 million. Scholarships were awarded to 7,979 students in Bolivia, Colombia, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, India, Kenya, Madagascar, Mexico, Nicaragua, Peru, the Philippines, Tanzania, Uganda and Venezuela. Many scholars are sponsored youth who need extra financial help in addition to sponsorship support to complete their educations. Non-sponsored older students identified by local Unbound staffs as being in need of educational assistance and having a desire to serve their communities are also eligible for scholarships and represent 52 percent of the scholarships awarded. The service requirement is an important component of the program. Service may include tutoring, helping children in the sponsorship program write letters to their sponsors in the U.S., translating letters or performing work related to their fields of study. A number of former scholars go to work for Unbound as staff members after they graduate. They bring to their work a wealth of knowledge and a unique perspective on the program and their communities. Monitoring program success. Scholars are required to maintain good grades in addition to fulfilling service requirements. Local Unbound staffs monitor students to make sure they are meeting program requirements, and they provide annual reports on their local service-scholarship programs. Unbound has also initiated qualitative evaluation with alumni of the scholarship program, utilizing a group mind-mapping process and individual interviews to explore long-term outcomes. FORM 990, PART III, LINE 4B	Unbound in 2013 conducted Ripple-Effect Mapping (REM) with more than 80 program alumni in the Metro Manila area of the Philippines and in 2015 with 32 program alumni from rural communities in Guatemala. REM is a participatory and qualitative evaluation method used to learn the intended and unintended results of the program. While the contexts of groups are dramatically different, with different geographies and significant cultural differences, the similarities between the outcomes strengthen the argument for what might be Unbound's contribution through the scholarship and sponsorship programs. Alumni participating in the qualitative evaluation in the Philippines, on average three years out of the program, were pursuing careers from teaching to nursing and accounting to architectural design. Alumni participating in the evaluation in Guatemala, on average six years out of the program, mentioned employment as teachers, police officers, bakers and small-business owners. Most of the evaluation participants were employed on a full-time basis. Among the key findings were: <ol style="list-style-type: none"><li>1. Gratitude and giving back. The feeling of gratitude and the action of giving back were both connected and common across the ripple maps in Guatemala and the Philippines. Participants expressed how individuals and communities in poverty can focus internally on what little they have, but through Unbound they began to see the strengths and assets they did have. This gratitude for what they had and for what was shared through Unbound spurred a desire to help others, whether family, friends or strangers.</li><li>2. Pride. A deep sense of pride and personal accomplishment came forward in the maps of both countries. It is a pride that comes from educational accomplishments and the ability to sustain one's family. However, it also comes from being part of, or associated with, the Unbound program itself (Philippines) or having a sponsor (Guatemala).</li><li>3. Education. Education and academic achievements show up in all ripple-effect maps created in Guatemala and the Philippines, however, their positioning and value differ between both countries. Guatemalans viewed education as a key outcome and means to their most significant outcomes. Attaining an education meant gaining access to professional employment and caring for their families. It brought about satisfaction and pride. In the Philippines, however, alumni emphasized education as an end in itself. Having an education was the outcome. The most significant, long-term outcomes of the Unbound program are overwhelmingly real and intangible. Housing and health, education and work are all present in the lives of Unbound alumni today, yet the core of the impact remaining for formerly sponsored members lies in the moral, character-centered, reflective and goal-oriented worldview that they carry with them. This intangible core appears to offer a foundation for the alumni to continue to build their own tangible ripples in providing for their families and assisting</li></ol>
