Name: The Coffee Trust

Form 990 (2016)

Form 990, Part III, Line 4a:

The Coffee Trust supports health, education, economic diversifications, and agricultural productivity among coffee farmers and their families in the highland Ixil area of Guatemala The Coffee trust works closely with local partners Asociacin Chajulense, Chajulense de Mujeres, and CopiChajulense de Miel The principal programmatic strategies include 1) The use of Effective Microorganisms for increased coffee production, and sustainable household and agricultural practices 2) Organic soil replenishment practices 3) Savings-led microcredit groups and financial literacy for women 4) Educational scholarships, and technical assistance for small producers 5) Capacity building for honey producers The Coffee Trusts efforts are rooted in the principles of Campesino a Campesino, the shared learning practices from farmer to farmer, and focused on local resource procurement, which strengthens community leadership and local economies, resulting in more self-sufficient and sustainable communities The Coffee Trust envisions a world where coffee producers are growing more than coffee and growing towards a more prosperous future, connecting the hands behind the cup through programs that inspire coffee-producing communities to empower themselves and become agents of change in their homes and communities The Ixil region is mostly rural with a majority indigenous population (90%) The indigenous Maya Ixil people were particularly affected by Guatemalas brutal 36-year civil war The result of historic discrimination against Ixil people, lack of access to public services and resources, and the debilitating effect of the war, has left the region and its people with some of the highest rates of poverty, illness, and malnutrition in Guatemala Despite these difficulties, the people of the Ixil region show continued resilience and strength The Coffee Trusts comprehensive approach inspires families as they harness the rich natural resources and social capital that empower people to act autonomously for integrated community development based on their priorities, values, and culture The Coffee Trust continued to support coffee farmers in bouncing back from the coffee rust crisis that crippled coffee production and devastated small coffee farmers throughout the Ixil region of Guatemala The Coffee Trust uses the innovative methodology of applying Effective Microorganisms (EMs) to coffee fields to kill the coffee rust fungus (roya) on coffee leaves and starve the fungus in the soil During 2016, in collaboration with Asociacin Chajulense, The Coffee Trust trained 19 agricultural promoters who then periodically visited 700 farmers fields to disseminate information and exchange techniques related to the application of EM and other good agricultural practices These agricultural promoters not only helped to exchange learning and practice related to the use of EM, but also its local production so that more farmers will have access to EM on a long-term basis As a result, the 2015/2016 coffee harvest for Asociacin Chajulense yielded 18 containers of coffee for export, an increase from the 11 containers from the 2014 harvest These farmers now expect production to approach 23 containers in the 2016/2017 harvest The Food Sovereignty Project works with families to implement household health and agricultural techniques that build onto each other in an upward cycle of resilience that feeds families, protects against malnutrition and debilitating diseasessuch as respiratory and waterborne illnesses, and increases agricultural and animal productivity The Coffee Trust implements this model with the additional innovative use of Effective Microorganisms to further enhance the results of sustainable agriculture and household health practices In 2016, 175 families benefited from household gardens improved by worm compost and EM, improved chicken production using fly larvae, the sale of eggs, and improved stoves that reduce respiratory infections Food security promoters made household visits to support the implementation of these practices and exchanged techniques between households The Coffee Trust hired two additional food security promoters to support the growing demand and interest in participating in this program The Coffee Trust worked to strengthen and further scale-up the Chajul Womens Associations savings-led microcredit model and a womens weaving cooperative The microcredit model provides low-interest credit and financial literacy courses, while promoting the practice of savings among women entrepreneurs As women make payments on their loans, they add savings to a collective fund they can then borrow and lend from In 2016, the number of participants in this model grew to over 2,000 participants who now invest their savings in coffee and cardamom production and small business One of these endeavors is the Womens Textile Cooperative, of which 50 women participate to create and export traditional fabrics in commercial markets The Coffee Trust trained women entrepreneurs in financial management and offered a training for women and their male partners on the prevention and reduction of violence against women The Coffee Trust also provided technical assistance to the Chajul Womens Association in administrative management to support the continual growth of womens savings groups and weaving cooperative The Coffee Trust continues to support the CopiChajulense Honey Cooperative, a group of over 130 honey producers in Ixil This year, the cooperative became fair-trade certified and will soon start the process for the organic honey certification These measures will open new markets for the cooperative The Coffee Trust provided technical assistance on productivity, good beekeeping and manufacturing practices, and administrative and financial procedures As a result of these trainings, the cooperative successfully introduced 400 fertilized queens to their hives and improved their production techniques The Guatemalan Dream program encourages young people to achieve their dreams through formal education The Coffee Trust began this program in 2016 to encourage young people from Ixil to continue or return to school The Coffee Trust currently offers scholarships for four students, which covers the costs of school registration fees and travel for 1 high school student and three university students The Coffee Trust plans to scale-up this scholarship program in coming years with more funding 2016 PROJECT ACHIEVEMENTS SUMMARY-Coffee farmers from Asociacin Chajulense increased coffee production from the previous harvest, filling 18 containers for export -With support from The Coffee Trust, Asociacin Chajulense, coordinated with MercyCorp to build a user-friendly coffee production monitoring program using the app, FarmForce This will help farmers better measure & estimate productivity as well as understand and predict agricultural trends related to climate change -Women participating in the Food Sovereignty Project were successfully able to produce enough chickens for their families and then share additional offspring to other families as a part of their commitment to share the benefit to their communities -The Womens Textile Cooperative established new commercial relationships La multicolor, Nvica, Karma Living, La Cesta, Hands of Guatemala Hands of Guatemala committed 10% of the sales back to TCT development programs -The Honey Cooperative, CopiChajulense, produced 3,700 pounds of honey from 148 beehives and became officially certified for fair trade -The Coffee Trust built an online monitoring & evaluation system based on field data collection through the use of tablets This allows The Coffee Trust to have immediate access to data and improve analysis of project results
