DESIGN CHALLENGES and EDUCATION PROGRAMS: BIOMIMICRY GLOBAL DESIGN CHALLENGE (BGDC): For the last eight years, the Biomimicry Institute has worked with university students and first-time entrepreneurs around the world through its design challenge program. The program's goal is to provide a platform for learning about, and practicing, nature-inspired design, and then applying that design to true sustainability challenges around the world. In 2014, the Biomimicry Student Design Challenge, officially morphed into the Biomimicry Global Design Challenge (BGDC) to allow for independent professionals to enter. The BGDC is a worldwide competition that asks students and entrepreneurs to solve problems around food, energy, water, and other climate-related issues using biomimicry. The BGDC 2015-2017 challenge is focused on food systems. In 2016, the first cohort of Food Security Challenge participants entered the Biomimicry Accelerator (soon to be renamed "Launchpad"), which takes the top ten teams from the Challenge and helps them turn their design concepts into functioning prototypes that they will hopefully then take to market. Simultaneously, we launched the second cohort of the Food Security Challenge design concept phase, which consisted of 86 teams from 18 countries. In addition, we supported 1100 new, registered users for a total to date of ASKNATURE: As the only database for innovators to find biological models for design guidance, AskNature is mission-critical for our work. We currently have over 1900 articles describing biological strategies and the ideas they've inspired, along with over 130 indexed resources for students and educators of biomimicry. 24,000 people have accessed this free resource content since September 2016. In order to provide a robust tool that provides real value to the 50,000+ people who visit the site each month, we need to offer exponentially more content. Manually creating high-quality content (defined by manually measuring accuracy, clarity, appropriateness for our audiences, and completeness) is time-consuming and requires quite a bit of specialized knowledge, including finding subject matter and graphics, synthesizing the information, manually assigning functions and living systems to biological strategy records, and writing summaries. In order to surmount this obstacle, the AskNature team is taking a three-pronged approach: training expert volunteers to author and edit a core selection of in-depth articles, partnering with an in-kind team from IBM Research to use machine-learning algorithms that will make it possible to rapidly increase the depth of high-level biological information indexed on AskNature, and making it possible for AskNature's users to share and build upon

COMMUNICATIONS AND OUTREACH: This program includes other supportive Biomimicry Institute (TBI) educational outreach activities such as sales of TBI products like our Second Nature video, Ask the Planet children's music CD, and online biomimicry courses. We are the hub of biomimicry and the growing practice and interest of biomimicry. We filter thousands of inquiries each year from the general public, students and professionals wanting to learn more about biomimicry. In addition our staff provide materials, resources, workshops and speaking engagements to a wide array of audiences.

Schedule I, Part I, Line 2 - The guidelines for design submission and rules that oversee the Biomimicry Global Design Challenge and award process are posted on our Challenge website, challenge.biomimicry.org. The awards are given at the end of the challenge so we do not have criteria for monitoring the use of these funds. However, our guidelines on the front end of the challenge dictate how the designs are judged and the selection criteria we use to determine the award winners. For the travel assistance in the form of a small cash per diem, we do not have criteria for monitoring the use of that as it is just to offset their small travel incidentals. For monitoring the use of general grant funds, we as a matter of practice, require a signed grant agreement which requires each partner to submit an interim progress report and a final project report including programmatic activities and corresponding project financial activities.

BGI is a for-profit social enterprise whose majority shareholder is TBI's founder and current non-voting board member. In 2010, TBI and BGI's missions were uniquely aligned, therefore, TBI entered into an agreement to share costs such as the sharing of facilities, equipment, employees, and overhead costs. Under these agreements, common costs and shared employees were allocated to each entity based on the actual costs incurred based on hours worked or other basis most appropriate for the costs to be allocated. AS of January 1, 2015, TBI stopped sharing facilities and only shared a few administrative employees, equipment and overhead costs. By January 1, 2016, TBI only shared a few common overhead costs, such as website hosting and a shared server. As of July 2016 these agreements were terminated.
