The primary evaluators of the Executive Director's performance are the President, President-Elect and immediate past president. They gather information from members of the Board of Governors. In April, some combination of the President, President-Elect and immediate past president conduct a performance review with the Executive Director. In September, the President recommends to the Board of Governors' Budget and Headquarters Committee the salary and other compensation items for the Executive Director for the following calendar year. The Budget and Headquarters Committee considers this recommendation and recommends a compensation package to the full Board. Once the Board decides on the Executive Director's compensation for the year, the President sets forth the details in a letter to the Executive Director at his/her home address. In determining the compensation of the Executive Director, the President and Board must at least once every three years engage an outside organization to conduct an executive compensation review for the Executive Director. Such review should compare the salary and total compensation of the OSBA Executive Director with competitive market data of non-profit membership organizations with operating budgets of a size similar to OSBA's. In 2014, OSBA contracted with a third party consultant to perform a comprehensive compensation study. The study included salaries from both for-profit and non-profit entities. The process for determining the compensation of employees other than the Executive Director is as follows. Each year, all supervising employees must hold an annual performance review with each employee who reports to them. Following the performance review, the supervisors make salary adjustment recommendations to their supervisors for each of his or her direct reports. The recommendation is based on 1) the performance of the employee, 2) the increase or decrease in the consumer price index as reported via the US Government website, 3) current economic conditions in Columbus, and, in the case of executive staff, the USA, 4) to the extent they are available and applicable, comparable salaries and other forms of compensation, 5) other factors as may be appropriate. The Executive Director and Assistant Executive Directors review all of the salaries (except those of the Assistant Executive Directors) and determine whether modifications are warranted, at the April or June meeting of the OSBA Board of Governors. The Executive Director submits a budget request for the total dollars needed for compensation for the following calendar year.
