Form 990 (2016)

Form 990, Part III, Line 4a:

The Agros model is a uniquely holistic approach to alleviating rural poverty. By providing long-term land loans to the poor along with training and services, entire rural villages are empowered to become self-sustaining and escape the devastating effects of extreme poverty. In the past year, Agros served 489 families in 7 communities/3 countries, with an integrated program of health, education, financial empowerment, and agri-business development. Every community realized meaningful improvements in each intervention area: child/maternal health, food security and nutrition, educational attainment, dignified homes/clean water/public health, agricultural production increases, and loan repayments/earned equity. Agros expanded an accelerated agri-business plan that integrates working capital, technical training, and commercialization support to farming families. Farmer participation in this plan grew from 55% in the previous year to 91% in this past year. Acres under agri-business cultivation grew from 185 acres in September 2016 to 305 acres in September 2017--a 65% increase in participation in one year's time. The average Central American small-holder farmer produces 1.8 harvest per year. Agros farmers are realizing 2.4 harvests per year and are on their way to producing 3.5 harvest per year next year. The transition from subsistence to economically sustainable producer occurs at around 3 harvests per year.
