990 Schedule O, Supplemental Information

Return Reference	Explanation
Form 990, Part III, Line 4a	These types of collaborations offer an incredibly rich setting in which to work, and often give rise to important questions that stimulate thinking and drive progress toward the cure and prevention of diabetes. Here at Joslin, independent thinking and creativity are valued and supported because we recognize these are the ingredients that lead to greater understanding and discovery. Researchers have the opportunity to exchange ideas and challenge one another in a setting that nurtures teamwork and allows for the unpredictability of research. The scientific process requires a multi-disciplinary team approach like the one found at Joslin Diabetes Center. One of only 11 federally designated Diabetes Research Centers (DRCs) in the U.S., Joslin has been funded by the NIH/NIDDK since the late 1980's. The primary aim of the Joslin DRC is to provide a facilitating framework for conducting multi-disciplinary basic and clinical research and to encourage the scientific development of young investigators. Special attention is paid to fostering rapid translation of basic research to the next level, accomplished via three major programs of the Joslin DRC: 1. Core Laboratories which provide services, reagents, specialized technical expertise and education directed at enhancing the productivity of research programs; 2. Pilot and Feasibility projects that support the development of new investigators and allow established investigators to explore new areas, and strengthen bridges to surrounding institutions; 3. The Enrichment Program which provides a series of seminars, workshops and visiting professors to provide continuing education, stimulation, and foster collaborations with external research programs. This extensive relationship between research and clinical care—which is central to Joslin's approach to diabetes—has resulted in the most important historical discoveries and improvements in diabetes care worldwide. This includes the recognition that tight blood glucose control can slow or prevent diabetes complications, creation of treatment protocols to enable women with diabetes to have healthy babies, the identification of markers for pre-diabetes, and pioneering laser surgery and anti-VEGF injections for diabetic eye disease—all developed at Joslin. Our research has an impact on people with diabetes locally, nationally and internationally—in the areas of type 1 diabetes, type 2 diabetes and diabetes complications. For example, investigators in several Joslin research sections are exploring the complexity of diabetes complications, such as cardiovascular, kidney and eye disease. Where else could you find a database of biological and psychological data from patients with diabetes, stretching back decades? Genetics researchers at Joslin are studying what changes in the genes make people with diabetes susceptible to these complications. Other investigators focus on the impact of insulin on blood vessels. And still others specialize in the molecular mechanisms that

990 Schedule O, Supplemental Information

Form 990, Part III, Line 4a	t lead to long-term complications. Included in the many areas of scientific exploration is pediatric research. At a basic research level, we are working on untangling the complex combination of genes and environment which results in the destruction of insulin-making cells in the pancreas, the cause of type 1 diabetes. We are also exploring the potential of stem cells and islet cell transplantation. We want to understand type 2 diabetes better as well, as it is increasing in alarming numbers among children and teens. Therapies for type 2 diabetes are geared to adults, as this was formerly considered just a disease of adulthood. In addition, Joslin is part of the Boston Autologous Islet Replacement Therapy Program (BAIRT), an academic and industry sponsored research program that looks to link a patient's own insulin producing cells to cure diabetes. Complementing our basic research work is our clinical research. These clinical trials or human studies evaluate promising new drugs, the impact of lifestyle changes such as weight loss and increased physical activity, and much more for all types of diabetes. Sharing Diabetes Expertise with the World. Joslin scientists know that a research breakthrough can affect the health and lives of millions of people. And so can education. Since 1987, Joslin has combined its clinical, research and education initiatives to meet the educational needs of diabetes patients, providers and vendors around the world. Through Joslin's educational programs, we seek to improve the public health at large. Joslin has one of the largest diabetes training programs in the world, educating 150 MD and PhD researchers annually. There are countless Joslin MD and PhD alumni working around the world. Clinical Guidelines. Joslin has developed a number of Clinical Guidelines to help healthcare providers, both at Joslin and in the community, improve the treatment and care of individuals with diabetes. The guidelines serve as the basis for all of Joslin's clinical programs, care pathways, professional and patient education programs and enduring self-management materials at Joslin in Boston and at our affiliate and care alliance partners worldwide. The Guidelines are free and easily accessed via the Joslin Web site. Strategic Industry Partnerships. Joslin global strategic partners leverage Joslin Diabetes Center's expertise in research and clinical care to deliver novel treatments and technologies to the diabetes community. Partnerships include R&D strategic alliances in drug development, diagnostics, biomarkers, device and food technologies, as well as collaborations that integrate new technologies with care practices, outcomes research, and payer strategies, and have wide geographic impact. Professional Education. We know that 90 percent of people with diabetes see their primary care providers (PCPs) for their diabetes care.
