Form 990, Part VI, Section B, line 12c	At the beginning of each Board of Trustees meeting, the board reviews USRA's conflict of interest policy and each trustee present submits a conflict of interest disclosure form. The conflict of interest policy is applicable to employees. USRA provides in its employee handbook that all employees will identify any outside employments, financial interests or relationships that might conflict with the best interest of USRA and that they will not use proprietary information for personal gain or to the detriment of the organization. In the event a potential conflict is identified, USRA requires the individual to recuse themselves from participating in any affected transaction or governing body deliberations and decisions, and to take such other situationally appropriate course needed to mitigate or avoid the conflict.
