Return Reference	Explanation
Part I, Line 2	NWP uses a multiplicity of monitoring methods for keeping track of its grant recipients and the grant deliverables to ensure that the grant funds are used for proper purposes. One primary method is a grant reporting cycle made up of financial, statistical, and narrative details outlining what was accomplished with each grant. In addition, NWP has a team of staff engaged in technical assistance that includes monitoring and support of grant recipients' activities as well as annual review of their A-133 single audit reporting. Senior program leaders sometimes perform site visits targeted at recipients needing more in-depth support, such as new recipients, as well as hold national or grant-specific convenings of sites, and in the process verify programmatic and project compliance, increase effectiveness, disseminate successful practices, and negotiate remediation, if needed.
