The Research Capacity Strengthening (RCS) is working to increase the number of research leaders in the region & improve institutional capacity for research writ large across academia through flagship doctoral training programs: the Consortium for Advanced Research Training in Africa (CARTA), & the African Doctoral Dissertation Research Fellowship (ADDRF). Achievements include:

1. In 2017, 16 CARTA fellows graduated with doctoral degrees, bringing the total number of graduates to 53 out of 190 fellows supported so far. The fellows published 148 papers in peer-reviewed journals, helping to ensure that African research reaches a global audience.

2. Fifteen ADDRf fellows graduated in 2017, bringing this program's total impact to 149 new African PhDs, across reproductive health, population and public health fields. In 2017, the fellows published 35 papers in peer-reviewed journals.

3. Conducted a series of short-course training workshops for a broader audience of academic, advocacy & other research-interested institutions.

4. CARTA expanded its partnerships in 2017, bringing the University of Bergen (Norway) & Uppsala Monitoring Center (Sweden) into the consortium to provide more opportunities for the training of doctoral candidates and placement of post-doctoral researchers.

4b (Code:) (Expenses $ 1,567,109 including grants of $ 175,053) (Revenue $)

This year marked a shift in the way APHRC approaches our research into adolescent sexual reproductive health: by engaging with young people over the course of the year as partners in research uptake, instead of as sources of information alone.

1. APHRC released a study on teachers, principals, & students, looking at how well the national comprehensive sexuality education curriculum is being implemented in secondary schools, as directed by the Government of Kenya's health and education policies.

2. APHRC joined the Kenyan Ministry of Health in hosting more than 400 young people at an adolescent health symposium looking at the challenges they face as they transition to adulthood. At this event, APHRC led parallel tracks: one focused on early adolescents aged 10-14, whose voices are rarely heard as part of these kinds of discussions. These young people were able to describe in their own words both the turbulence and milestones of adolescence, and how to guard against the risks they may encounter as they go through puberty. A second track for older adolescents reached young people from across Kenya for discussions on whether or not APHRC's research on comprehensive sexuality education reflects their own experiences, and what else they need to ensure their health and wellbeing.

4c (Code:) (Expenses $ 1,456,610 including grants of $ 81,946) (Revenue $)

The Education and Youth Empowerment (EYE)

1. The Unit's flagship program is a 600-school evaluation across Kenya of an early childhood development & education intervention that seeks to better understand how best to prepare preschool children to attend primary school. A key finding was the need for innovation and transformation in teaching practice and pedagogy, to institutionalize classroom-based teacher support and feedback in order to improve individualized attention and create more opportunities for active learning.

The evaluation results have been shared with the Kenyan government: a key partner of the EYE Unit as part of our involvement in helping to shape the new national education curriculum as part of the curriculum reform process that culminated at the end of 2017.

2. Engaged with the Kenyan government in convenings with legislators and officials from the Ministry of Education to confront the problems presented by unregistered low-cost private schools that are meeting education needs in urban slums around the country.

3. Engaged with Uganda and Tanzania as part of a wider consultation with civil society and their respective education ministries to articulate the specific needs of school-age children in rural areas and urban slums, and the importance of a differentiated approach to education to meet those needs.
