Sched F, Part 1(2) Procedures for monitoring In Vietnam, the Vietnam Green Building Council has become an independent Vietnamese and raises its own funds through corporate membership and fees. Since it is self-sustaining, only a small amount of financial support is needed. The money spent last year was for travel expenses of Green Cities Fund's unpaid VGBC board member, verified through receipts. Additional expenditures in Vietnam were for development of the OMEGA program conceived by NASA scientist Jonathan Trent, where space technology is applied on earth to convert CO2 and sewage into clean water and algae products on a floating platform powered by sun, wind and wave action. In addition, Green Cities Fund continues to support the Nha San Art Collective through scholarships and exhibition grants. Nha San artists practice cutting edge political art in a challenging environment, in much the same way as Ai Weiwei in "plays chess" with the Government. Gabby Miller (daughter of GCF founders) has helped establish the collective on firmer ground through various international grants.

In Cuba unpaid representatives of GCF supervise various projects involving deep ecology, organic farming, development of curriculum and conferences on worker cooperatives and "people to people" contact with the Cuban people.
