North American Arabidopsis Steering Committee (NAASC), was formed to forge relationships, foster communication among North American scientists, and provide North American representation to the international community involved in research and education using the plant Arabidopsis thaliana (a small flowering plant that is widely used worldwide as a model organism for basic research in plant genetics/molecular biology).

- 2
- Did the organization undertake any significant program services during the year which were not listed on the prior Form 990 or 990-EZ?
- ☐
- Yes
- ☒
- No

If "Yes," describe these new services on Schedule O.

- 3
- Did the organization cease conducting, or make significant changes in how it conducts, any program services?
- ☐
- Yes
- ☒
- No

If "Yes," describe these changes on Schedule O

- 4
- Describe the organization's program service accomplishments for each of its three largest program services, as measured by expenses. Section 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) organizations are required to report the amount of grants and allocations to others, the total expenses, and revenue, if any, for each program service reported

4a (Code:) (Expenses $ 379,857 including grants of $ 1,611) (Revenue $ 313,458)

A primary function of the organization is to organize and secure funding for (typically from government grants and sponsors) the annual International Conference on Arabidopsis Research (ICAR) when it is held in North America. The ICAR is currently on a 3 year rotation schedule such that it is held in North America once every three years. ICAR 2017 had 460 attendees.

The ICAR promotes rapid exchange of information among students, postdoctoral scholars, faculty, and other professional scientists of the latest plant science information. The science conference also serves as an important forum for students and pre-professionals to highlight their research and education, and take part in professional and educational development activities.

The conference attendance ranges from approximately 500 to over 1,500 people, and is open to the international community of people (including the public) that may wish to attend and learn and share plant biology research and education advances/information. As part of the ICAR, the organization provides travel grants to a subset of invited speakers, particularly junior faculty that may lack significant travel funds. The organization also provides travel grants to students and postdoctoral scholars, as well as groups that are under-represented in US science, as part of its mission to promote diversity and access within the scientific community. Last year the organization conducted travel grant program for ICAR that supported financially more than 60 students, postdocs, and faculty.

4b (Code:) (Expenses $ 1150 including grants of $ 0) (Revenue $ 0)

Another primary function of the organization is to support North American plant science activities involving research and education (often in cooperation and collaboration with international scientists). This support occurs in three major ways: (1) leading program and initiative development, including seeking governmental grants to fund projects; (2) participating in similar, related, and complementary activities to maintain and strengthen science ties; and (3) to provide advice or input when requested, from other groups and initiatives.

Examples of how the organization carries out each of these:

(1) Organization members solicited and received a 5 year governmental grant from National Science Foundation to lead plant science activities including workshops, meetings, outreach efforts, and develop publications and other scholarly reports.

(2) Organization members have participated in workshops and meetings, including giving presentations, and co-authoring articles, upon request from other groups.

(3) The organization has been contacted by related educational and scientific groups and societies with requests to provide input, advice, or cooperation for relevant plant science activities.

4c (Code:) (Expenses $ 0 including grants of $ 0) (Revenue $ 0)

The organization serves as a liaison between members of the research community and government and not-for-profit granting agencies, and provides representation of the research community to service facilities such as the Arabidopsis Biological Resource center (ABRC), which was established at Ohio State University in September 1991. The mission of ABRC is to acquire, preserve, and distribute seed and DNA resources that are useful to the Arabidopsis Research community.

Additional groups that the organization has provided representation to includes:

The International Arabidopsis Informatics Consortium: the purpose of the IAIC, established in 2011, was to facilitate a coordinated plant science effort involving Arabidopsis informatics that would successfully maintain continuity of key Arabidopsis resources while expanding their breadth and depth.

The Plant Science Research Network: the purpose of PSRN, established in 2015, is to further collaboration and coordination among various plant science groups to develop new funding and research priorities across the plant sciences.

4d Other program services (Describe in Schedule O.)

Part III- Line 4a: Primary program service accomplishment: In support of the organization's mission to foster relationships and communication between North American and international plant biology researchers, students, and educators, it organizes and secures funding (mainly from government grants and sponsors) to support the International Conference on Arabidopsis Research (ICAR) when it's held in North America, every 3rd year. In 2017 the ICAR was organized by this organization in St. Louis, Missouri, with an overall attendance of 460. The ICAR is a forum for seminars, talks, poster sessions, and other educational and scientific activities. This major function for the organization involve setting up a conference program, inviting speakers, lodging them, and providing food for attendees, paying for conference rooms and AV, and staff. The conference is open to the public and a registration fee is charged to partly defray expenses. Additional funding and sponsors must be applied for, to pay for full conference costs and to provide travel funding to some attendees. The organization supported over 60 attendees (faculty, students and postdoctoral scholars) in the form of free or reduced registration, partial or full lodging costs, and some direct funding support ($1,611 paid out to 5 individuals.) Additional travel support was provided through an application and selection process completed by the organization (funds/grants were given directly to awardees from another organization, a collaborating University).

Line 4b: a second program function is to engage in workshops and seminars by related plant biology efforts, including sometimes to lead new efforts and/or activities. $1,150 in travel funds were supplied by the organization for board or staff members to participate in workshops.
