Regular feedback is given to the projects. Staff representatives from the unbound headquarters office visit each project at least once per year to assess program and administrative performance, visit program beneficiaries in their homes, and provide support and training to project teams. Formal performance audits are performed periodically, typically once every three years. In addition, the unbound finance department has a team of financial auditors who regularly audit the projects internal controls, processes and procedures, and the accuracy of their recordkeeping. They have established a schedule for auditing each project on a regular basis. There are other processes, too, through which unbound is able to monitor the project performance and adherence to unbound policies. Unbound requires an updated annual photo of each sponsored member, and has processes to assure the authenticity of every photo. Unbound requires each sponsored member to write to his or her sponsor at least twice each year. The letters are regularly reviewed on a sample basis before being sent to sponsors. Sponsors eagerly anticipate letters from their sponsored friends. Unbound organizes group trips called awareness trips and facilitates individual sponsor visits to a number of the projects each year. Unbound encourages all sponsors to visit their sponsored friends and view firsthand the work of the projects. In 2017, 885 sponsored children and elderly were visited.

FORM 990, PART III, LINE 4A	Total grants for the sponsorship program were $105.2 million in 2017. At the end of 2017, a total of 310,069 individuals in Latin America, Asia and Africa were sponsored through Unbound. They included 279,205 children and youth, 30,593 elders and 271 candidates studying for religious vocations. Following are examples of achievements in the sponsorship program, as sponsored individuals and their families partnered with Unbound to identify the unique challenges they must overcome, set their own goals and devise plans to achieve them. Unbound's sponsorship program connects children, youth, elders and their families with individual sponsors and supportive local communities of staff members and other families. Through sponsorship, individuals and families have resources and a solid support network to begin to chart their own course out of poverty. In 2017, Unbound had programs in 20 countries, including Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, India, Kenya, Madagascar, Mexico, Nicaragua, Peru, the Philippines, Tanzania, Uganda and Venezuela. Unbound closed its offices in Brazil and Venezuela during 2017. Sponsors - through their monthly financial contributions and letters they receive from their sponsored friends - experience a sense of connection with someone in another part of the world and satisfaction knowing they are helping another human being reach their full potential. Sponsors also have the opportunity to write to their sponsored friends to offer their encouragement and build rewarding relationships. Unbound had 261,066 sponsors from the U.S. and around the world at the end of 2017. Sponsored individuals and their families partner with Unbound to make program and benefit decisions that help them meet their basic needs and develop their potential over the course of their time in the program, which is sometimes 18 years or more. Sponsored individuals and their families use financial assistance to help meet needs such as education, nutrition, housing improvements, transportation and health care. They also have access to leadership and economic development opportunities related to financial literacy, skill development and income generation. Sponsorship requires active participation from families as the assistance is highly personalized. Families take a central role in deciding sponsorship benefits, and in forming support networks in which they encourage and are accountable to each other. Small support groups of parents and guardians, mostly made up of mothers, are key in the sponsorship program's success. Outcomes vary but typically relate to education, leadership development, improved health and nutrition status, dignified housing, skill development and increased income through livelihood opportunities for families. Monitoring program success. Monitoring and evaluation of programs. Unbound is committed to learning from our work and ensuring that the work makes a positive impact.

FORM 990, PART III, LINE 4A	in the lives of children, youth, elders and families around the world. The organization asks two basic questions to earn donor trust and be at our best for those we work with: 1. Did we do what we said we were going to do? This is program monitoring. 2. Did it make a difference? This is program evaluation. Unbound distinguishes between monitoring and evaluation and maintains separate but complementary strategies. Monitoring The principal purpose of monitoring is accountability. Regular program monitoring is conducted to ensure fidelity in the organizational structure, development of programs, implementation of policies and the appropriate use of finances. Some of this monitoring happens across distance with regular reporting, emails and phone calls. Much of it happens with personal, on-site visits from Unbound's Kansas City headquarters staff. Unbound's monitoring strategy includes: <ol style="list-style-type: none">1. Project visits made annually to each project for staff development, program support and assessments.2. Financial audits conducted in each project.3. Program audits conducted in each project.4. Awareness trips and individual sponsor visit opportunities. Evaluation Learning is the focus of program evaluation. Unbound's personalized approach to sponsorship requires a unique and creative approach to evaluation. The organization has developed a three-tier system to evaluate the outcomes of the Unbound sponsorship program to address the learning and decision-making needs at all levels: individual, project/program and global. Individual outcomes Letters from sponsored individuals to their sponsors provide direct feedback about how the relationships and support make a difference. Sponsored children and youth, for example, often write about how they are progressing in school or how the benefits of the program impact them and their families. Program outcomes Programs at the project level are tailored to the needs of sponsored individuals and their families and the initiatives of Unbound in their communities. Families work with program staff to define and measure outcomes and utilize the results for continuous program improvement. With training and technical support from the evaluation team, these locally directed evaluations ask questions like: What is the program accomplishing? How are families different now? What could we do better? Global outcomes As an international organization, Unbound also recognizes the need to step back periodically and look at the big picture. Global evaluations explore questions of organizational outcomes for all program participants across borders and in every region. These broad assessments help us tell our collective story and understand the effectiveness of our approach in key areas such as educational attainment, economic self-sufficiency, empowerment of mothers and community participation. Each tier of our evaluation framework is important to understanding the whole of Unbound's impact and its complex contribution to individual goals around

On behalf of sponsored individuals, their families and sponsors, the governing board of Unbound rigorously monitors the integrity and accountability of the organization's operations. The board proactively defines the outcomes expected from the organization. Management must then produce verifiable data proving progress toward the expected outcomes. Management chooses the means to achieve the board's ends. However, the board sets ethical and prudent limits on which means management may use to achieve the board's ends. The board systematically monitors compliance with these executive limitations. As a result, the board confidently assures donors that their contributions achieve their promised objectives, and that the organization remains transparent and ethical. Monitoring activities and evaluation methods. Unbound conducts financial and program audits of projects on a regular basis to ensure financial resources provide intended benefits and services and sponsored members are empowered to direct their own development. In addition, almost all projects receive at least one visit by headquarters staff every year. Staff members also accompany sponsors on Unbound awareness trips visiting projects and families in the Unbound program. In 2017, headquarters staff spent more than 1,247 total days in the field monitoring and supporting programs. In addition, the organization performs quality checks on letters and photos from sponsored friends to their sponsors, and monitors member retirement rates and sponsor retention rates. Unbound collects educational attendance and performance data and documents the final education level achieved by sponsored members leaving the program. Unbound projects around the world conduct evaluations in their local contexts to determine outcomes for sponsored members and their families. Methods include surveys of sponsored members on income and skill development, focus groups on attitudes and behavioral changes, and interviews to document empowerment. Organization-wide program evaluations focus on four key domains: education, economic status, community participation and empowerment. Empowerment refers to one's ability to make decisions for one self and act freely in a way that is intentional and goal-oriented.

EXAMPLES OF PROGRAM SUCCESS	Sponsorship helps children achieve a level of education that prepares them to compete with peers for jobs and be educated community members, parents and leaders. At a global level, at the point of leaving the program, 75 percent of sponsored children achieved a level of schooling comparative to or above national peer averages, according to data gathered from 2011-2014. This means that Unbound students - who experience marginalization based on economic, social and geographic factors - were able to compete and excel alongside students from all socioeconomic brackets and areas within their countries. Of these former sponsored children, 51 percent achieved educational levels a year or more above their national peer averages. The number jumped to 59 percent achieving a year or more above their national peer averages when looking at the experience of sponsored girls. This, along with country-level analysis, indicated a specific impact on girls' education and a closing or reversing of the prominent gender gap present in many communities. In Guatemala, for example, sponsored children, on average, achieved almost three years of schooling more than the national average for their peers. And in Unbound's Quezon program in the Philippines, 57 percent of sponsored youth pursued post-secondary education compared to 30 percent of their peers. Sponsorship impacts the sponsored child and the entire family. Unbound's direct work through a personalized benefit model and parent groups means families are able to best allocate resources for their children and direct how the program supports their development as families. As of September 2014, 77 percent of all Unbound sponsored members participated in the program through small groups. These groups provide the space for families to have a voice in the program and be part of a supportive community, addressing two significant components of poverty: lack of choices and isolation. In 2017, an evaluation measuring the empowerment of mothers of sponsored children was performed. It compared those mothers to mothers who are waiting for their children to be sponsored. The evaluation found that parents of children sponsored through Unbound displayed a stronger level of ownership of psychological assets - such as happiness, control, goal setting and self-esteem - than the wait-list parents did. Unbound mothers were members in community groups, organizations, networks or associations as well. Mothers and guardians in Unbound reported feeling they are having a greater impact on their community. Thirty percent of Unbound mothers said they were involved in making decisions within their communities compared to 16 percent of mothers in the comparison group. Evaluation results showed how more women in Unbound are taking economic risks starting small businesses to enact change. More women in the Unbound program have their own businesses, and fewer women in the program are unemployed than mothers in comparison group. More mothers in Unbound

EXAMPLES OF PROGRAM SUCCESS	also reported having complete choice in deciding or changing their occupations. Unbound in 2013 conducted a global evaluation of participation and empowerment indicators across all regions where Unbound works. A random sample of 697 participants revealed that three-fourths of all parents actively decide what their children will receive as benefits, and more than 40 percent were creating personal budgets and contributing regularly to savings accounts to build financial resiliency. In addition, 90 percent of mothers of sponsored children said they believed they have the power to change their family's situation, while 70 percent reported speaking up about their ideas and opinions and 63 percent were active in solving problems in their communities, according to data acquired in 2013. Unbound is now in the fourth year of a six-year longitudinal data collection on economic outcomes for sponsored members and their families. The evaluation includes both quantitative and qualitative data and follows families from the time they begin the program. In the communities served by Unbound, elders face challenges related to health, access to care and medicine, and loneliness. Unbound seeks to overcome these challenges through monthly benefits such as food assistance, help with health and medical expenses, home visits and group activities. An evaluation is being conducted that will measure Unbound's impact with elders in relation to overcoming these challenges. This evaluation will be completed in July 2018. The results of this evaluation will aid in our understanding of the effectiveness of the Unbound programs' global impact with elders and help us make decisions to improve how the program serves elders globally. Finally, various project (community) level evaluations are ongoing and led by program staff in each country. The primary purpose of evaluations at the project level is to ensure continuous program improvements and adaptations to the ever-changing world around the program. For example, an evaluation conducted in Cali, Colombia, in 2017 has led to new activities to link goal setting with benefit selection. An evaluation in Santa Ana, El Salvador, in 2016 led to an increased focus on the empowerment of mothers participating in small groups to increase their self-perception as leaders. A 2016 evaluation in Quezon, Philippines, was conducted to learn the value of a nutritional program so that the project could gradually phase out the food assistance aspect of their program in favor of other benefits, without negatively impacting families. A 2016 evaluation in Kampala, Uganda, found that 70 percent of members of small groups participated in saving within their group. Sixty-eight percent of the evaluation respondents stated their motivation for saving was to secure their finances for the future. Feedback from sponsors: Unbound recognizes sponsors and other benefactors not merely as donors but, first and foremost, as highly valued and respected members of the Unbound community.

Educational support provided by Unbound's service-scholarship program helps talented older students who, because of economic circumstances, are struggling to continue their educations. The program is based on the principles of perseverance, leadership and service to the community. The service-scholarship program complements the educational support provided by the Unbound sponsorship program, with 58 percent of scholarship students also sponsored. Unbound scholarships have helped students in communities around the world achieve their educational goals. Students are able to complete their educations, follow their chosen career paths and be of service to the larger community. Scholarships are used for needs such as secondary, post-secondary and vocational school tuition, transportation, school supplies and books. Students are selected by local program staffs based on economic need, commitment to completing their educations, demonstrated leadership potential and interest in community service. Scholarship students participate in service projects as a requirement of the program. Scholarships are intended as supplemental assistance, and students and their families contribute what they can toward educational costs. In 2017, scholarship grants to Unbound field offices totaled more than $3.1 million. Scholarships were awarded to 10,472 students in Bolivia, Colombia, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, India, Kenya, Madagascar, Mexico, Nicaragua, Peru, the Philippines, Tanzania, Uganda and Venezuela (Unbound closed its office in Venezuela in 2017). Many scholars are sponsored youth who need extra financial help in addition to sponsorship support to complete their educations. Non-sponsored older students identified by local Unbound staffs as being in need of educational assistance and having a desire to serve their communities are also eligible for scholarships and represent 42 percent of the scholarships awarded. The service requirement is an important component of the program. Service may include tutoring, helping children in the sponsorship program write letters to their sponsors in the U.S., translating letters or performing work related to their fields of study. A number of former scholars work for Unbound as staff members after they graduate. They bring to their work a wealth of knowledge and a unique perspective on the program and their communities. Monitoring program success. Scholars are required to maintain good grades in addition to fulfilling service requirements. One benefit of the ripple-effect-mapping method, over separate evaluations of each outcome domain, is that we can see far more clearly that there are links between the physical and psycho-social-spiritual development. This makes an excellent case for the personalized attention, program activities and relationships that complement tangible sponsorship benefits. These components can also be called benefits. "The beauty is that each family can choose what is needed in each moment," said one participant in Guatemala. Each individual tells a vastly different story, but all are united in their experience with Unbound. So, while these experiences do force us to recognize the significant influences of external factors in the lives of individuals, they also emphasize the remarkable flexibility of the Unbound program. It has the potential to contribute to an individual's path out of poverty in ways unlike a standard aid-distribution or community-based development approach.
