to improve the economic well-being of their communities, preserving family farms and ranches, supporting local, sustainable agriculture, developing small businesses and clean energy, and being responsible stewards of Idaho's water, land, air, and natural resources.

Part III, Line 28: We worked to educate members and supporters on the importance of local food and supported programs and initiatives to increase local food production and consumption in the state of Idaho. Our members tabled at farmers markets and events, sharing information and encouraging households to purchase more local foods. We worked with other organizations to increase their local food
