Form 990, Part III, Line 4b:

CONTINUATION OF PART III, LINE 4A DESCRIPTION Sdja is shaping the foundation of future thinkers, creators, and community leaders by blending modern education with deeper meaning and purpose. For more than three decades, san diego jewish academy (sdja) has been a premier independent jewish day school educating students to reach their fullest potential. Through close attention to each student's learning profile, children develop and grow in a rigorous academic environment that focuses on the whole child. Students benefit from experiencing joy in their learning and in being part of a supportive social and emotional environment that prepares them well for college and beyond.

Continuation of part iii, line 4a description Sdja has a deeply engaging curriculum, giving students a strong foundation in both core academics and in jewish literacy. Sdjas preschool through 12th grade experience begins with the early childhood center, offering children from six weeks to five years an active environment that helps them develop cognitively, socially, and emotionally. As children transition into kindergarten and beyond in the golda meir lower school, students are immersed in an environment that encourages critical thinking and exploration, placing the child on a path of growth and lifelong learning. With a pluralistic approach to judaism, an integral part of the lower school experience includes both hebrew language acquisition and understanding of the richness of jewish culture. A strong foundation in both academics and judaic studies enables students to easily integrate into the maimonides upper school. Starting with the sixth grade, upper school students encounter more than just an academically rigorous and transactional environment, but a transformational one, where children will ultimately find their way. Sdja understands that in order to truly engage and educate a child, you first need to understand him/her. By offering students personalized attention, they develop relationships with their teachers, and in the same respect, teachers understand them. This fosters an innate sense of community at the school, which truly enhances the child's education. The result of sdjas approach ensures that graduates overwhelmingly are accepted to their first and second choice colleges, and, more importantly, they go on to live lives of meaning and purpose. Sdjas graduates fulfill the schools mission of furthering academic excellence, social responsibility, and active jewish living. The vision of san diego jewish academy is to be recognized for the development of leaders in academic, jewish, and community endeavors, in technology, athletics, and the arts. The school program encourages each student to find joy and meaning throughout his/her lifelong pursuit of learning and growth. Sdjas graduates will be builders of vibrant and inclusive communities based on jewish texts and teachings. In october 2013, the san diego jewish academy board of trustees unanimously approved a long-range strategic plan, a vision of 2020. The creation of this plan occurred over eight months, bringing together hundreds of parents, community members, teachers, students, trustees, and supporters in a series of structured conversations, board retreats, focus groups, online surveys, and strategic exercises. The strategic plan is now being implemented, and will further advance sdja to a position of excellence over a five year period. One vital aspect of the strategic plan covers jewish knowledge, literacy, and culture, stating sdja will provide an exemplary environment in which the joy of jewish traditions, teachings, and values, and the love of israel, will foster a strong sense of jewish commitment, literacy, and ethical practice that will guide students life choices and kindle a passion for a life of jewish meaning. With a curricula that inspires purpose, the lower school embraced one annual project, which asks 5th graders to look within and to their roots. The shorashim project is also known as the "my family story international competition." My family story is a comprehensive curriculum that provides jewish students and teachers with the tools to join jewish communities around the world in telling their stories and creating family history projects. In short, the curriculum offers a creative and hands-on methodology for teaching jewish heritage, promoting the historical memory of the jewish people, and creating a sense of jewish peoplehood. In 2013, ten intentional finalists from around the world gathered in israel to participate in the my family story awards ceremony at beit hatfutso, the museum of the jewish people. Among those ten finalists were two 5th grade students from sdja, an unprecedented win considering the number of entries received from all over the world. Sdja was singled out for its double accomplishment, that two students from the same school have won is both impressive and unusual and confirms (sdjas) wonderful dedication to this project! Said dvora greisman daniels of the international school for jewish peoplehood studies at beit hatfutso. Then, in 2014, two san diego jewish academy 5th graders did it again, achieving a never-before-seen second double win. Those two students traveled to israel and joined the other international finalists. They both went on to win the international competition, taking the two top spots. In 2015, sdja achieved the unbelievable achievement of yet another double win now 3 years in a row! Two very excited sdja students (and families) traveled to israel to represent both sdja and the united states. Creating an environment in which the joy of jewish traditions, teachings, and values, and the love of israel will foster a strong sense of jewish commitment, literacy, and ethical practice isn't limited to just the lower school. It inspires purpose throughout the entire campus. One initiative designed to ensure this continues is the jewish visioning project. San diego jewish academy embarked on this years-long project focusing on the jewish character of the schools community, and their vision for the future at sdja. The purpose of this project is to examine and redefine the vision of what it means to be a pluralistic jewish day school today. Faculty, administrators, and staff meet regularly to discuss ideas, concepts, thoughts, and direction, to determine best practices and to find the right fit for sdja. Parents were invited to join in the discussion and provide vital input. The idea is that the vision is to be a shared vision. Sdja is translating that vision into the school's curriculum, classrooms, schoolwide culture and a number of new initiatives, including several institutes - the advanced institute for judaic studies (aijs), the institute for creative writing and the arts, and the institute for innovation and entrepreneurial thinking (iuet) as they seek to realize their maximum potential as sdja. Reinforcing the school's strength in academics are sdja's programs in science, technology, engineering, and math (stem). They have received notable recognition with the goal of sdja's science department of creating lifelong learners of science who are inspired to explore possibilities and to question and understand the world in which we live. Students are encouraged to recognize science itself as an activity, one in which humans have a direct role. Over the past six years, sdja has achieved enormous success disproportionate to the size of the student population. It is with this success in mind that the board strategically placed stem within its long-range strategic plan, a vision of 2020. Examples of stem success at sdja include our intel finalists and a first place at the intel international science and engineering fair. Seven million students compete annually to receive an invitation to intel as it is considered the top high school science competition in the world. Placing first at intel is an enormous accomplishment. Simply being invited to intel is an achievement as only 1,600 students are invited per year, but receiving a first place award means the recipient is in the top 0.000005% of science students worldwide. In our middle school, two students went on to achieve extraordinary success with their 8th grade science fair projects. One student won the google international science fair in their age category, and another was named the marconi/samueli award for innovation at the broadcom masters national science fair in washington d.c. Other notable accomplishments can be found on our school website - including two students who were chosen by the white house to present their projects to the president. Sdja's goal via stem is to continue to challenge minds and to create a truly world class science brand, one that inspires our best and brightest minds to explore the furthest boundaries of their intellectually curious minds for the benefit of our planet and the billions who inhabit its shores with contributions in medicine, technology, food production.
