The Women's Community Leadership Initiative (WCLI) educates and empowers women of modest means and diverse backgrounds, who have overcome hurdles of community dependence, to develop a deeper awareness of their potential to make a difference and become productive contributors to their community and Leading Edge is an interactive community leadership program focused on developing high school teen leaders. The program runs five consecutive full days in August and then follows with weekly four-hour sessions in the fall. In addition to the program time, the teens participate in small-group community impact projects.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4c:

Community Projects One of the most valuable components of LPP's leadership programs is its group projects. Groups of 5-12 people work with a local nonprofit or government agency to help that organization achieve a goal. For the groups, it means hands-on experience tackling a real community challenge. For the organization, it means support for the kind of long-term project that is difficult to complete with volunteers or busy staff.
