Form 990, Part III, Line 4a:

California Condors remain critically endangered. Only 22 individuals existed in 1982, but through captive breeding and production of condors in the wild, a substantial population exists today, both in captivity and in managed wild populations. With continued releases, and aggressive adaptive management, we are holding steady in overall restoration with a total world population of over 500, with more condors in the wild than in captivity. The Peregrine Fund currently has 51 condors in Boise, the largest captive population in the world. In September 2018, 11 condors were transferred to release sites. To date we have released 203 condors, confirmed 36 wild-hatched young, documented 137 fatalities (70 diagnosed, 67 missing or unknown), and returned 11 individuals to captivity permanently. Field staff have collected and analyzed extensive data on seasonal movements, foraging patterns, lead exposure, treatment, and reproductive behavior. Lead poisoning remains the principle mortality agent and lead-caused deaths continue at unsustainable rates. Movements and behavior of the flock of 90 condors in northern Arizona and southern Utah are daily monitored due to this ongoing threat. Management agencies in Arizona and Utah continue mitigating efforts to reduce lead available during their respective big-game hunting seasons, 87% of Arizona deer hunters and 80% of Utah deer hunters within the immediate range of the condor have taken action to help reduce lead exposure. We began discussions with management agencies to address additional pathways of lead into the landscape as data reveal that a healthy percentage of lead-caused death comes from sources other than those used to harvest big game. As a result, the Arizona Game and Fish Department initiated surveys and conducted focus groups in the latter half of 2017. This process, the same used for big-game hunters, is designed to initiate lead-reduction discussions with small-game, varmint, and furbearer hunters to address this potential source. With continued effort and progress in reducing lead within the landscape, we are confident that the condor population will reach sustainable levels and thrive.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4b:

Madagascar is one of the world's highest conservation priorities due to the immense diversity of endemic species that are found there, and because of the rapid rates of habitat loss. Protecting critical and unique habitat for threatened raptors and other biodiversity is an important component of this project. Three of 24 Malagasy raptor species are endangered, two had not been seen for more than 60 years until rediscovered by us in the 1990s. In the Tsimembo-Manambolomaty Lakes Complex Protected Area (PA) Madagascar Fish Eagle productivity surveys recorded 14 nesting attempts composed of 7 normal pairs (7 females and 7 males) and 7 polyandrous pairs (7 females and 14 males). Fish eagle surveys in the Antsolova region in areas outside and surrounding the protected area, documented 7 nesting attempts composed of 15 individuals (7 females and 8 males). Waterbird surveys recorded 38 species including 4 threatened totaling 2,515 individuals in January and 5,779 individuals in July. Local capacity training involved 190 persons in two training sessions on management guidelines for natural resource use (109 persons) and control and surveillance (81 persons). The local association established 26 km of fire break around the reforest area, and the fire break around the protected area was cleaned and maintained. The project distributed over 400 fishing nets to local fishermen, purchased school supplies and equipment for nearly 3,000 local students, and provided allocations to 12 primary school teachers. One university student graduated with his Master's degree on fisherman impact at the Tsimembo-Manambolomaty Lakes Complex PA from the University of Antananarivo. Another student at the University of Antananarivo continued his field studies on lemur populations in collaboration with support from SOS Lemur (International Union for Conservation of Nature-IUCN). At Mandrozo Lake PA Madagascar Fish Eagle productivity surveys recorded 6 breeding pairs composed of (13 individuals). Waterbird surveys recorded 33 species totaling 6,325 individuals including five threatened species. Local associations in the reforestation program planted 52,000 sapling trees and monitored 400 coconuts with assistance from TPF technicians. Over 310 fishing nets were provided to the fishermen and they harvested 190 tons of fish during the fishing season. Lemur surveys recorded two species composed of 323 individuals of which 230 were Brown Lemurs, and 93 were Decken's Sifakas. The doctoral student studying Bat Hawks recorded 29 individuals composed of 8 breeding pairs, 8 single individuals and 5 juveniles. Four of the 5 pairs in the Mandrozo Lake PA region made nesting attempts and all four were successful in fledging one young each. Thirty-one fiberglass canoes were provided to the fishermen at Mandrozo Lake PA to decrease mature trees from being cut down for dugout canoes. At Bemanevika PA annual monitoring of the critically endangered Madagascar Pochard recorded 62 adults made up of 34 males, 28 females and 6 juveniles. One master's student graduated from the University of Mahajanga studying the Slender-billed Flufftail. Two PhD students continued their third year field studies for their dissertations studying bird population structure in varying forest fragment sizes, and local raptor populations and their threats. One student began her doctorate degree on the population status of chameleons at Bemanevika and Mahimborondro PAs and another doctorate student began his field work on the Madagascar Buzzard. The project provided training and 2.5 tons of seeds for agricultural activities to the local communities. One hydroelectricity plant producing 35 kilowatts was built near the villages of Amberivery and Anolakely, close to the protected area, and began providing electricity to more than half of the people living in these two communities. The reforestation program planted 21,636 native sapling trees, and the local associations with assistance from TPF technicians planted young trees in one of the degraded areas surrounding one of the volcanic lakes inside the PA. Three environmental clubs were formed around Bemanevika PA with participation by 323 students.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4c:

The Peregrine Fund's Education Program at the World Center for Birds of Prey in Boise, Idaho serves to engage and inspire people to be conscientious stewards of the environment. Birds of prey are excellent indicators of ecosystem health and their ability to thrive in the wild is directly correlated with decisions made by humans. Birds of prey are also inherently interesting, and lend themselves to all aspects of the Life Science curriculum taught in Idaho schools. The mission of the Education Program is to serve as a resource, enabling people to connect meaningfully with birds of prey and the natural world. Our program is a key scientific resource for area schools, and a regional attraction that serves to engage audiences from around the world. During FY18, the Education Program at the World Center for Birds of Prey directly reached a total of 53,704 people through on- and off-site programming. This includes 46,171 visitors that participated in programs at the interpretive center. General admission was $10/adult, $8/senior, $5/children 16 and under, and free to members and children under 4. School-endorsed programs were provided free of charge to 4,008 students, 320 teachers, and 449 parents, for a total reach of 4,777 people. Teacher satisfaction, as determined through online surveys, remained extremely high. Of the school groups, 48% of students were from schools qualifying for 'Title-1' status which serve low-income communities. Nearly 150 volunteers contributed 11,105 hours to implement our programs. According to Serve Idaho, this time contribution is valued at approximately $242,000. We created dynamic programming throughout the year appealing to a wide variety of audiences. Family Field Trip Weekends, Scout Days, Homeschool Days, a public lecture series, art workshops, habitat restoration work parties, International Museum Day festival, and Fall Flights. Off-site programming included visits to libraries and schools, and a host of other events which reached 7,500 people. In response to a need for increased educational opportunities for upper level K-12 students, we continued a program called Raptor High. Middle and high school students are underrepresented in our school tours because school schedules do not often allow for field trips. Raptor High is a summer internship program where students are trained to serve as interpretive naturalists at the center. This year 23 students participated in Raptor High and contributed over 900 hours interacting with visitors. Our intention is that after a visit to the World Center, people are inspired to take meaningful action on behalf of birds of prey.
