1. Public Online Information Services

Erowid Center developed, maintained, and provided free access to an online collection of more than 85,000 documents, images, and other media files related to psychoactive plants and drugs. More than 13 million unique visitors accessed the information in this online archive in 2018. The collection contains essays and articles authored by a broad spectrum of contributors including health care professionals, substance abuse counselors, toxicologists, chemists, therapists, law enforcement agents, lawyers, anthropologists, writers, media, educators, and the general public. Note that the Experience Reports Collection is tracked as a separate program service.

4b (Code:) (Expenses $ 81,086 including grants of $ 0) (Revenue $ 0)

2. Experience Report Collection

Erowid Center solicits, reviews, and publishes first-hand reports of people's experiences with psychoactive plants, drugs, and technologies. This project produces vital information about psychoactive materials as well as aggregate data about why and how people use psychoactives, both for current factual documentation and for the historical record. Reports are reviewed and edited before being published. Trained volunteers perform a portion of the reviewing work under the supervision of Erowid staff. The resulting data is used by researchers, academics, medical professionals, and the public for educational purposes and as source data for peer-reviewed articles and publications. In 2018, Erowid published 5,295 experience reports (more than any previous year) and ended the year with 33,500 published reports in the collection, covering 740 substances. Approximately 25 million experience reports were viewed during the year.

3. DrugsData / EcstasyData Lab Drug Checking & Analysis

Erowid Center runs a laboratory drug checking program that analyzes the contents of ecstasy tablets, novel psychoactive substances (NPS), research chemicals, street drugs, and pharmaceuticals. Members of the public submit samples to a DEA-licensed laboratory and the results are published online at DrugsData.org and EcstasyData.org. The project also collects, manages, reviews, and presents laboratory testing results from other US and international organizations. The information is made publicly available to help harm-reduction efforts, medical personnel, researchers and the public. In 2018, 514 samples were tested through the project. These results were published along with results for an additional 528 samples tested by other organizations. An average of 14,000 people viewed these results online each day.

Form 990, Part I, Line 3 - Volunteers

Erowid Center has a wide variety of volunteers who span from senior researchers to policy makers, from informed parents to college-age drug geeks. In 2018, Erowid Center had over 1,500 volunteers on its volunteer email list, 274 signed up as general content reviewers, and 38 active Experience Report volunteers. Volunteers reviewed and edited content, found and summarized news stories relevant to our educational mission, visited physical libraries to locate reference materials, helped with archiving projects, and triaged or reviewed Experience Reports. Erowid volunteers contributed over 2,000 combined hours, though we do not ask volunteers to document their time.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4 - Program Services (2018)

1. Public Online Information Services — (expenses: $91,234.58, grants: $0, revenue: $0)

Erowid Center developed, maintained, and provided free access to an online collection of more than 85,000 documents, images, and other media files related to psychoactive plants and drugs. More than 17 million visitors accessed the information in this online archive in 2018. The collection contains essays and articles authored by a broad spectrum of contributors including health care professionals, substance abuse counselors, toxicologists, chemists, therapists, law enforcement agents, lawyers, anthropologists, writers, media, educators, and the general public. Note that the Experience Reports Collection is tracked as a separate program service.

2. Experience Reports Collection — (expenses: $81,085.95, grants: $0, revenue: $0)

Erowid Center solicits, reviews, and publishes first-hand reports of people's experiences with psychoactive plants, drugs, and technologies. This project produces vital information about psychoactive materials as well as aggregate data about why and how people use psychoactives, both for current factual documentation and for the historical record. Reports are reviewed and edited before being published. Trained volunteers perform a portion of the reviewing work under the supervision of Erowid staff. The resulting data is used by researchers, academics, medical professionals, and the public for educational purposes and as source data for peer-reviewed articles and publications. In 2018, Erowid published 5,295 experience reports (more than any previous year) and ended the year with 33,500 published reports in the collection, covering 740 substances. Approximately 25 million experience reports were viewed during the year.

3. DrugsData / EcstasyData Lab Drug Checking — (expenses: $78,128.96, grants: $0, revenue: $48,825.00)

Erowid Center runs a laboratory drug checking program that analyzes the contents of ecstasy tablets, novel psychoactive substances (NPS), research chemicals, street drugs, and pharmaceuticals. Members of the public submit samples to a DEA-licensed laboratory and the results are published online at DrugsData.org and EcstasyData.org. The project also collects, manages, reviews, and presents laboratory testing results from other US and international organizations. The information is made publicly available to help harm-reduction efforts, medical personnel, researchers and the public. In 2018, 514 samples were tested through the project. These results were published along with results for an additional 528 samples tested by other organizations. Visitors to DrugsData.org increased steadily throughout 2018, beginning with an average of 8,200 unique viewers per day in January and ending with 17,300 unique viewers per day in December (an average of 13,100 per day average across the entire year).

papers from anonymous experts in related fields to be organized, indexed, preserved, and eventually made publicly available. Erowid Center also moved into, installed archival shelving in, and furnished a new climate-controlled library/office space. This space is designed to allow processing of historical archive collections (organizing, scanning, photographing, and digitizing). It also includes space for permanent library/archive collections. This expansion was made possible by the unexpected contribution from the Pineapple Fund and matching donations from other supporters.

5. Education and Educational Materials, Books, and Gifts — (expenses: $44,121.71, grants: $0, revenue: $9,488.88) Erowid Center provided direct education services by answering questions from the public via email and other communication systems. Erowid maintains a social media presence via Twitter, Facebook, LinkedIn, and Instagram, through which we publish new information, news and research updates, and answer questions related to psychoactives. With the objective of educating the public on the risks and benefits associated with emerging drugs, we 1) monitor the availability, use patterns, and effects of these substances through consultation with volunteers, allied organizations, medical professionals, and online forums; 2) analyze chemicals through our DrugsData / EcstasyData program (expenses tracked separately); 3) coordinate between experts and researchers in the field; 4) educate writers and authors for media, news, and books; and 5) publish information about these substances online and in print.

7. Erowid Extracts Educational Newsletter – (expenses: $17,303.40, grants: $0, revenue: $0) Erowid Center published one issue of its newsletter (#30) centered on information, articles, and statistics about Erowid’s Experience Reports project (project expenses tracked separately). Initially, this advertisement-free print publication is distributed to members. A complete digital version and constituent articles are later published online for free access by the general public. More than 15,000 copies of previous issues of Erowid Extracts were viewed/downloaded in 2018, and thousands of people read individual articles from previous issues online. Back issues were also distributed at events and conferences and paper issues were sent worldwide for free to related organizations and events.

Erowid works directly with scientists—in areas where we have specialized knowledge—to help design credible studies and provide editing, reviewing, and fact-checking for resulting academic publications. In 2018, Erowid Center’s resources were referenced in over 120 journal articles, books, and media articles, and Erowid staff co-authored two published peer-reviewed journal articles. Erowid Center has built a network of both professionally-trained and self-taught experts with knowledge about psychoactive plants, chemicals, and technologies. Erowid Expert Network (EEN) members volunteer to share their expertise for the purpose of educating the public and improving the quality of information about this topic. The EEN facilitates making connections between those who are seeking information and experts who can help them. This furthers Erowid Center's mission by helping to improve both internal and external educational resources through increased fact checking and review.
