Form 990 (2018)

Form 990, Part III, Line 4a:

Other programming that children can benefit from educationally are the various art workshops offered throughout the year, such as crafting and jewelry making. The intention is to expose children to the diversity of the arts and broaden their experiences by learning how to make different things while doing crafts that are fun. Art is a form of education, and children often learn best by visual, auditory stimulation and being hands on. Art programs in public schools facilitated the learning process for children, making learning fun, which is why the UAG continues to promote art and to create programming for youth, because it is not only an essential component to their education, but to their self-development. With this grant, we will bring the power of art and music to the community by partnering with different community groups that work with children and adults.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4b:

Urban Art Gallery has replenished the community with some free programs for children, such as vocal lessons, music lessons, and arts and craft, which allow children to express themselves artistically and building one community. There are several educational benefits granted to children who have exposure to musical programming. Music helps teach children to memorize and exercises multiple parts of their brain. It increases coordination, children who practice with musical instruments typically have improved hand-eye coordination. Music instills pride and provides the children with a sense of achievement. Music helps children develop emotionally, as it builds self-esteem and serves to cope with stress, and anxiety. Music also builds imagination and creativity, and strengthens children intellectually, as they are learning the complexities of reading and understanding music as well as simultaneously playing various instruments.
