Form 990, Part III, Line 1, Mission:

The Mission of Due Process Institute is to honor, preserve and restore those Constitutional rights intended to protect individuals and organizations against the arbitrary exercise of government power, particularly in criminal justice settings. This mission of procedural fairness is a vital one given the erosion of these rights in recent decades. Importantly, due process concerns transcend liberal/conservative labels and therefore the organization focuses on achievable results based on core principles and values that are shared by all Americans.

A few of the key principles that guide the organization's work include:

- The People must have notice of the laws before they can be criminally charged or punished for violating them
- The People must be given the right to present evidence, call witnesses, and cross-examine opposing witnesses, and to know the opposing evidence
- The People must be free from unreasonable searches and seizures
- The People have a right to a fair and impartial grand jury
- The People must be given a meaningful opportunity to be heard by an unbiased tribunal in a timely manner
- The People have the right to be represented by counsel

While the overwhelming majority of the Due Process Institute's work finds its mooring in specific Constitutional procedural due process guarantees, on occasion the Organization partners with allies across the political spectrum to support the general principle of fairness in the criminal legal system, such as working to ensure that millions of Americans with a criminal record receive a "second chance" and have access to healthcare, education, housing, and employment as well as supporting the passage of meaningful prison and re-entry reforms.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4, Program Service Accomplishments:

A. Policy Work

The Due Process Institute's policy staff work alone and in harmony with many diverse coalitions on bipartisan criminal legal issues to address key issues of importance to the Institute's mission, including supporting criminal sentencing reform, criminal discovery reform, criminal grand jury reform; mens rea reform; prison reform; criminal and civil asset forfeiture reform; the Constitutional right to adequate and informed counsel, the right to a fair trial; prosecutorial accountability; increased pretrial procedural justice (including but not limited to issues such as bail and plea bargaining), conspiracy law reform; forensic integrity; and a wide variety of 4th Amendment guarantees. The policy staff also works to address the causes and harms of over-criminalization and over-incarceration, unwarranted expansions of government surveillance, and unnecessary, vague, or overreaching criminal laws. The Due Process Institute pursues these policy objectives through a variety of means including analysis and scholarship, advocacy, lobbying, public education events, and amicus filings.

In its first year, the Due Process Institute worked to successfully pass the First Step Act, which was signed into law on December 21, 2018.

The Due Process Institute served as a leader in the advocacy regarding this historic piece of criminal justice reform legislation and was recognized as such on the floor of the Senate at passage. The Due Process Institute also successfully lobbied the Congress to refrain from pursuing amendments to current law regarding the quantity of drugs required to trigger mandatory minimum sentences and from increasing the length of those sentences and to refrain from pursuing laws that would expand penalties for drug offenses, punish people who lack criminal intent, and overcriminalize certain behavior in response to the nation's opioid epidemic. The Due Process Institute also advocated for important data regarding the government's collection of details of phone calls to be publicly disclosed; advocated for passage of the E-mail Privacy Act and other legislative changes that would update laws in a way that reflects technological changes and surveillance based on unverified suspicions of wrongdoing; opposed over-criminalization and over-incarceration; advocated for changes to criminal discovery rules that will lead to a more just legal system; advocated for prosecutorial accountability; joined the Digital Due Process Coalition in their efforts to modernize America's surveillance laws in the internet age; and joined as a partner celebrating Second Chance Month, which raises awareness for the millions of Americans with a criminal record who deserve a second chance.

In its first year, the Due Process Institute e-published position pieces on: the First Step Act; the CLOUD Act; concerns regarding the presence of executive agency detailees in Congress; the impact of public defender fees on children and families; bail reform measures; prosecutorial accountability; and overcriminalization concerns. The Due Process Institute also executed such public educational events as a screening of Abacus: Small Enough to Jail at the E Street Cinema in Washington DC, with a moderated Q&A session with members of the Sung family and one of the documentary's producers. Nominated for Best Documentary Feature at the 2018 Academy Awards, the film serves as a compelling portrait of the Chinese-American community in New York City as it intersects with a deeply flawed criminal legal system. In addition, this year members of the Organization's staff were quoted in major media outlets regarding overreaching criminal laws and unfair aspects of the criminal legal system.

In its first year, the Due Process Institute also filed amicus briefs in cases involving: acquitted conduct sentencing, prosecutorial accountability; right to counsel issues in plea bargaining; limiting or abolishing qualified immunity for prosecutors and law enforcement who violate defendant's Constitutional rights; challenging the waiver of appellate review of highly suspect restitution; and forfeiture awards under the Excessive Fines Clause.

Finally, to enhance the Due Process Institute's core mission, the organization also served in a consulting role on behalf of other organizations by engaging in research and writing projects, developing and executing programs and events, and by otherwise supporting
