Form 990 (2018)

Form 990, Part III, Line 4a:

ZYZZYVA successfully executed its primary project of publishing the tri-quarterly print journal. In keeping with our mission since inception, our goal was to continue publishing the journal and to continue our support for writers and artists. To that end, we published three exemplary issues of the journal in 2018, featuring new works by 56 writers and substantial portfolios by 3 visual artists, in beautifully produced and carefully edited volumes which were distributed to bookstores and newsstands nationwide. We hosted or participated in 24 events to bring publicity, attention and a live audience to our authors. We continue to offer emerging talents a valuable, nationally-distributed platform (featuring fiction by 26 emerging writers in the journal over the course of the year) while also offering substantial support (through publicity, in print and online, through events, and through sustaining our increased author payments) for all our authors, emerging and established alike.

Return Reference	Explanation
Part I Additional Information	ZYZZYVA History and Mission ZYZZYVA was founded in 1985 as a not for profit arts organization whose main project is publication of a journal of contemporary art and literature. Over the past 34 years, ZYZZYVA has grown into a critically acclaimed cultural platform of national significance. We bring some of the best and brightest writers and artists to a diverse national and international audience through a print journal, which is published three times per year, a vibrant year-round schedule of free readings and events, and our website, zyzzyva.org, which offers original writing, video podcasts, interviews, and criticism. In June 2019, ZYZZYVA was honored with the Firecracker Award for Literary Magazine General Excellence from the Community of Literary Magazines and Presses Beneficiaries Many of contemporary literatures most lauded voices have launched their careers within the pages of ZYZZYVA, making it a reputable and pedigreed resource for new writers hoping to break through. Po Bronson, Chitra Divakaruni, Haruki Murakami, Jim Gavin and F X Toole all first appeared in the journal, ZYZZYVA was also an early publisher of Sherman Alexie, Molly Giles, Kay Ryan, Adrienne Rich, Raymond Carver and many others. Every year, never before published writers make their debut in ZYZZYVA. And unlike many small journals, we pay our authors for every piece we publish. ZYZZYVA therefore serves an important role in supporting contemporary authors and artists. Since 1985, ZYZZYVA has published 115 issues, bringing attention to emerging and established fiction and non-fiction writers, poets and visual artists. The journal is available in over 600 bookstores nationwide, as well as 116 libraries. Work appearing in the journal has consistently been reprinted in literatures most notable anthologies and honored by dozens of awards and prizes. Works from our 2012 issues received republication in the 2013 anthologies of Best American Short Stories and Best American Essays, and 8 pieces were named to the Best American lists of Notables. In the past 3 years, 4 pieces published in the journal have been selected for reprint in Best American Short Stories, Best American Essays and Best American Nonrequired Reading, and 9 more have received Notable Designations, 2 pieces were also reprinted in the Pushcart Anthology, and 5 more acknowledged with Honorable Mentions. Since 2015, 3 stories have been selected for reprint in the O Henry Prize Stories. In addition, writers and artists highlighted in our journal have gone on to receive attention and support for their creative excellence from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Rona Jaffe Award, and Fulbright and Guggenheim Fellowships. Attraction of Public Support ZYZZYVA has always had a dedicated and engaged donor and subscriber base, and has always sought and received support from a variety of public sources. However, the sources of financial support for a literary organization are always hard to come by, especially given the

Upon assuming stewardship of ZYZZYVA in 2011, Editor Laura Cogan took several steps to strengthen the journal's long-term viability and financial health; these steps were taken swiftly, but, as can be expected, their benefits take time to fully develop. To help the organization get back on its feet, several large donations were solicited in attempts to keep the organization solvent, which was successful - but such donations ultimately hurt the public support percentage necessary for public charity status. ZYZZYVA has taken vigorous steps to increase our financial health every year. We created and initiated our first year-end fundraising campaign in 2013, which led to a 20% increase in revenue that year and was even more financially successful in 2014. ZYZZYVA also launched, for the first time ever, an annual event fundraiser in 2014, which raised even more money in 2015. To help build these new programs, ZYZZYVA hired a development consultant to help develop our fundraising infrastructure, an investment necessary to give us the tools to survive and grow as an organization. We are moving to end 2019 and future years in a healthy financial position by keeping our operating costs lean and continuing to build on contributed income with the strategies we have been developing and improving since 2014. These strategies include continuing our work to increase our individual donor base, and aggressively pursuing grant opportunities including government and private foundations. To that end, in 2018 we expanded our fundraising efforts to include a second fundraiser event in the autumn; we plan to continue hosting two such events this year and going forward. Our Board of Directors, though small, is a dedicated group of accomplished professionals from all backgrounds who see the value of this vibrant and productive arts organization, and support us in their various communities. Amid all these efforts, ZYZZYVA remains steadfast in our commitment to supporting our authors by paying them well, and to playing a vibrant role in the Bay Area arts community. As the cost of living in the Bay Area puts increasing pressure on the creative community here, local organizations that support such work are essential. For these reasons, ZYZZYVA should continue to qualify as a publicly supported charity.
