Animal Rescue. Our efforts to rescue, rehabilitate and release injured and orphaned wildlife into secure habitats span continents and species. Uniting all of our rescue work, whether Wildlife Rescue, Marine Mammal Rescue and Research, or Disaster Response and Risk Reduction, is our commitment to best practice, building capacity and learning from our experiences and partners. This fiscal year, IFAW supported the rescue, rehabilitation and, where appropriate, the release of more than 6,700 wild animals around the world, including elephants, rhinos, big cats, primates, bears, birds, marine mammals and reptiles. An additional 14,500 companion animals and 18,204 livestock were rescued during disaster responses. Community Engagement. We work closely with communities to ensure that, in the face of disease, disasters and changes in habitat, people and animals can thrive together in the places they call home. In FY19, our Community Engagement projects included efforts in Bali, Bosnia-Herzegovina, Morocco, Canada's First Nations, and Mexico. Other Community Engagement projects were part of landscape conservation work in Malawi, Zambia and Kenya where we supported solutions to mitigate human-wildlife conflict, improve food and water security and increase access to education.

Form 990 (2018)

Form 990, Part III, Line 4a:

Wildlife Crime The illegal trade in live animals and animal products is among the most inhumane and detrimental threats to their survival Wildlife species - many of which are already threatened by economic development activities and climate change - are increasingly victims of illegal wildlife trade By breaking every link in the criminal trade chain, we are making the world safer for animals and people We're decreasing the supply of illegal wildlife products by working with local communities and park rangers to stop poaching at its source, we engage with governments and the private sector to disrupt global trafficking networks, and we're curbing the demand for illegal wildlife products through raising consumer awareness and changing their behavior We advocate for the strongest possible global, regional, national and local legislation and policies to protect individual wild animals, populations, and their habitats We work on the ground with government and local community members to provide training, coaching, mentorship, infrastructure, equipment and other resources to prevent wildlife crime

Form 990, Part III, Line 4b:

Landscape Conservation, IFAW works to ensure that habitats remain functional to provide ecosystem goods and services to both animals and people who call them home. Empirical evidence shows that the last decade has been a period of extreme heat, almost certainly the hottest decade on record with temperatures on average 1.1 degree C hotter than in the pre-industrial period and moving towards the 1.5 degree C increase that could see the actual loss of vital ecosystems. There is also the reality of socio-economic development pressure on land resources that further compromises habitat quality and connectivity. So there's never been a more important time for us to take bold action to stem the threats to our planet. When habitats deteriorate so do the animals who live there, people suffer too. In eight endangered landscapes around the world IFAW is empowering people to invest in their natural assets. Across Africa, in India and in China, we are implementing community conservation projects at landscape level that benefit people, reduce human-wildlife conflict and protect iconic species like elephants in connected habitats.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4c:

Marine Conservation Life in the sea is under threat. As many as 1 million species live in our oceans, and many of them are in danger. IFAW works to protect whales and other marine species from threats including entanglements in fishing gear, collisions with high-speed ships, ocean noise pollution, commercial whaling, marine plastics and the impacts of climate change. Whether promoting alternative practices or lobbying for stronger laws, we focus on solutions that enable animals and people to thrive together. Known by Yankee whalers as the "right" whale to hunt, by the 20th century the North Atlantic right whale had been almost completely annihilated. Today, the species is one of the most endangered on the planet, with only about 400 individuals remaining, largely due to entanglement in commercial fishing gear and collisions with high-speed vessels. Through extensive advocacy efforts in the United States and Canada, grassroots campaigning and media outreach initiatives, IFAW is at the forefront of the effort to engage government officials, the fishing and shipping industries and other stakeholders to take immediate action to protect the right whale and proactively preserve their habitat.
