propagation, seed sowing, and hydroponic growing techniques. The farm hosted two disabled interns through the Blueprint for California Employment of People with Disabilities program. The farm added a Community Supported Agriculture program, selling produce to local customers on a weekly basis. Cut flower production included market bouquet making weekly. CRF was supported by a consistent group of approximately 25-30 volunteers who came to the farm weekly. Day programs serving adults with developmental disabilities attended gardening opportunities throughout the farm season as well, and Master Gardeners held educational classes on a variety of home gardening and chicken care topics. The farm held a volunteer day with approximately 100 volunteers. A weekend farm stand staffed by volunteers and people with disabilities was open June-September.
