Part V, Line 35: The Rachel Corrie Foundation for Peace and Justice holds public forums, lectures, and conferences from time to time and also periodically attends the functions of other groups to educate the public on peace and justice issues. At these events, the foundation often has a table with brochures and other literature about the organization and about various peace and justice issues. In addition, to educating the public about the economy of the Middle East and to attract people to our table for free information, we often sell olive oil products raised by small farmers in the West Bank and art and embroidery made by individuals in the Middle East and sold on a fair trade basis. We also carry several books related to peace and justice issues. We ask that the public pay for these more expensive items, since the foundation does not have the resources to give them away. Most sales are made away from the foundation's office by unpaid volunteers. While gross profit from this activity ($2,294) is above $1,000, the activity is exempt from tax both because it is related to the foundation's exempt purpose and because the sales are substantially conducted by unpaid volunteers. "Any trade or business in which substantially all the work is performed for the organization without compensation isn't an unrelated trade or business."
