Clarendon Foundation has received educational broadband (EBS) licenses from the Federal Communication Commission (FCC) in 22 cities across the U.S. In accordance with FCC regulations, Clarendon Foundation administers this program by providing 2.50 GHz advanced wireless services to accredited institutions and governmental organizations. In 2019, we expanded the reach of this program by providing more schools with FCC approved EBS educational technology. We estimate that on a whole, this program gives more than 40,000 students better access to educational information and content and allows teachers to work more efficiently. Clarendon provides a relief of burden to the US government and its agencies by following FCC mandates, rules and guidelines in this program accomplishment.
