Form 990, Part III, Line 4a:

A1R America in One Room was a historic gathering that brought together the most representative sample of the American voting electorate in U S history Over the course of three full days, this group engaged in a civil and nuanced deliberation on the critical issues facing the United States The entire sample took the same in-depth questionnaire before and after the event This process yielded important data concerning how Americans think about values, candidates, and policy issues when given the chance to think deeply, engage with different opinions, and deliberate in a fact-rich and respectful environment It was covered extensively in the media, and hailed by former US Presidents Barack Obama and Bill Clinton

Form 990, Part III, Line 4b:

Membership Program Helena's Membership program recruits, convenes, and communicates with a small group of world-leading experts in different fields to help Helena choose and operate our projects to address major global issues. In practice, this means i) Researching and networking to find potential Helena Members (people who represent the pinnacle of achievement in their and share a willingness to use that influence to achieve positive good), ii) recruiting them to join Helena (and agree to assets and talents to solve world problems), and iii) meeting with members to discuss important global problems, and the ways they can work with each other and with Helena to address those problems (e.g. through our other program services)

Form 990, Part III, Line 4c:

SOF The Social Outcomes Fund project, also known as 'Repurpose', was an effort to pioneer a new financial mechanism for enabling the large-scale repurposing of generic drugs. The United States is suffering from a crisis of drug accessibility and drug affordability. Currently, there are over 7000 diseases with no treatment, prevention, or cure. Developing treatments for these diseases could save lives and vastly reduce healthcare spending. Unfortunately, pharmaceutical products developed today can cost millions of dollars per treatment, making any new treatments largely unaffordable for patients. Generic drug repurposing -- the process of identifying new uses for generic, off-patent drugs--presents an opportunity to uncover breakthrough treatments. Compared to traditional drug development, generic repurposing takes half the time, is 2000 times more likely to succeed, and is 100 times cheaper. Generic drug repurposing can be leveraged to help treat diseases in an affordable and accessible manner. However, up to this point, drug repurposing has been almost impossible because of a lack of financial incentive. This is known as the "Problem of Repurposing". Through Repurpose, Helena developed a financial mechanism and an implementation plan to sustainably enable investment in generic drug repurposing. This financial mechanism uses share-in-savings, driving financial returns from healthcare savings rather than increased spending. This model blazes a trail toward sustainable and affordable drug innovation, and aligns the incentives for drug development with patient health and wellbeing.

Return Reference	Explanation
Schedule C, Part II-B, Line 1	Our 'Shield' Project aims to protect the US electrical grid from cyberattack, solar flares, natural disasters, and other potential threats. As part of this project, we had a handful (well under 10) of meetings with State and Federal legislators and/or policy staff to educate them about the dangers posed to the US electrical grid by cyberattack, solar weather, hurricanes, terrorist strikes, and other threats, and to offer policy advice. In addition, we interacted with a handful of White House, DoD, and DoE officials to advise on what became the President's Executive Order on Coordinating National Resilience to Electromagnetic Pulses (March 26th, 2019). Some funds were spent to pay for staff time and travel costs associated with these meetings. These meetings represented a diminutive portion (under 1%) of total staff time and expenditures by the organization.

Supplemental Information

Return Reference	Explanation
Schedule D, Part X, Line 2	The accounting standard on accounting for uncertainty in income taxes addresses the determination of whether tax benefits claimed or expected to be claimed on a tax return should be recorded in the financial statements. Under that guidance, the Foundation may recognize tax benefit from an uncertain tax position only if it is more likely than not that the position will be sustained on examination by taxing authorities based on the technical merits of the position. The tax benefits recognized in the financial statements from such a position are measured based on the largest benefit that has a greater than 50 percent likelihood of being realized upon ultimate settlement. The Foundation files Form 990 in the U.S. federal jurisdiction. It received its determination letter during 2018.
