Pt III, Line 31	Indigenous Cultural Concepts (ICC) is an organization which promotes traditional Indigenous knowledge, educates about cultural imperatives to help protect the earth and future generations. Louise Benally is the Director of ICC and is a Grandmother, Mother, farmer, rancher, traditional counselor, advisor, herbalist, environmental and human rights defender, health educator, permaculture teacher, cultural consultant and Dineh translator. Since the 1970's, Louise and her family have been resisting relocation and coal mining at Big Mountain on Black Mesa. For the last many years, she & many traditional people ICC has supported have traveled to and presented at dozens of local, national & international gatherings as well as being a part of frontline struggles with communities in Indian country. There has been an increase in the activity to educate the Navajo population and governing bodies to transition away from reliance on the Navajo Generating Station coal fired power plant, to shut it down once and for all, along with shutting down the Kayenta coal mine which has fueled it since it began operations in 1974. That was the same year as the Navajo-Hopi Relocation Act was passed by the US Congress. This genocidal act began the decades long forced relocation of thousands of traditional indigenous residents form their sacred ancestral homelands. The work of ICC and others has had a significant impact on the eventual decision to shutter the plant and mine, keeping it in the ground, as of decisions made by the Navajo Nation Tribal Council in May 2019. 2019 funds were spent spent on these areas: Travel/gas/food; Outreach/Education; Material supplies/fees.

Pt III, Line 31	Music Mentors Academies are innovative music residency programs that promote culture, health and help prevent addiction with tribal youth. We teach students how to write, record and perform their original musical messages with a year-long commitment as peer educators in community wide activities. This Project involves developing an original tribal youth created music CD to be used by the Puyallup tribe as a giveaway during the Paddle to Lummi Nation 2019. The CD will include recordings from Puyallup, Nisqually, Squaxin Island, Muckleshoot, Nooksack, Chehalis, Yakama, Swinomish, Colville and Lummi tribal youth. Tribal Canoe Journeys is a celebrated event for the Indigenous peoples of the Pacific Northwest Coast. Indigenous Nations from the coast of Tribal Canoe Journeys is a celebrated event for the Indigenous peoples of the Pacific Northwest Coast. Indigenous Nations from the coast of cothers made using more modern techniques and materials -- and visit Native Communities en-route to the final host destination. The CD explores young people's experiences, prevention ideas and coping skills in relationship to addictions, substance abuse, suicide prevention and health promotion. The program supports youth health promotion and prevention, through songs and music messages created by tribal youth for their peers, schools and communities. This CD was created in the spring of 2019 and delivered in summer of 2019 to the Puyallup tribe Canoe families, Puyallup Tribal chairman and leadership, Puyallup Education Department and participants at Paddle to Lummi 2019. The CD will be distributed to counselors and educators for use in the Puyallup tribal community. Funds were spent creating a youth created health promotion music CD for the Lummi 2019 canoe journey and all expenses to deliver the music CD. Budget: Expenses for curriculum and multimedia development; Tribal youth created CD, duplication, graphic arts and packaging; & Professional Services, Budget & Expenses; CD recording editing and mastering; Todd Denny, program director, curriculum development; Misc. travel expenses.

Pt III, Line 31	In 2019, Rising Tide North America engaged in three main areas of work, an international resistance tour, ongoing training and support for different climate struggles, support for smaller climate campaigns. International Resistance Tour: Ende Gelaende, out of Germany, is an organization that is dedicated to strong resistance against the lignite coal mines of Germany. Ende Gelaende has a unique way of telling its story of mass resistance, including how they organize, train and their tactics. Rising Tide's feeling was that our ways of direct action in the United States are often stale and fairly rote, so we brought Ende Gelaende on a US-wide tour. Four members of Ende Gelaende, two on the East Coast and two on the West Coast embarked on respective three week tours. The tours featured a general presentation at each stopped, and in many cases Ende Gelaende organizers participated in larger strategy meetings as well. On the West Coast, Ende Gelaende went from Olympia Washington all the down to Los Angeles. The East Coast tour started in Massachusetts, went through Vermont, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Appalachia, St. Louis and ended in Minnesota. The Ende Gelaende tour saw meetings at Universities, with local chapters of 350.org, with grassroots activists, and with indigenous activists, especially in Northern Minnesota. The Climate Disobedience Center used the Ende Gelaende Tour as its template for its #bucketbybucket actions in the fall of 2019. Members of the Rising Tide Collective have participated in a wide variety of trainings and training support throughout 2019. Collective members provided training and campaign strategy for folks in Appalachia, Minnesota, Texas, Oregon, DC and California. Rising Tide provided the framework for the giant mural painted in the San Francisco Financial District in September, and also for the 22 organizations participating in ShutdownDC. Rising Tide Collective members strive always to center People of Color and indigenous led organizations, and San Francisco was indigenous led whereas Black Lives Matter and migrant justice groups played a significant role in DC. Rising Tide also provided direct assistance to groups leading campaigns against extraction throughout 2019. Similar to 2018, a good chunk of money went to indigenous led leadership pushing back against Line 3 in Northern Minnesota. Rising Tide also is supporting a trainers switchboard, the DC and San Francisco actions, a multiracial coalition taking action at the airport in St. Louis, and work in Appalachia around the Mountain Valley Pipeline. Rising Tide Collective members also participated in Southern Arizona with No More Deaths, on doorknocking, water drops, and getting support for those facing trial for supporting migrants. Of Rising Tide's 501c3 eligible budget, about 40% went to the Tour, 25% to trainings and 35% to minigrants for actions, containers and trainers.

Pt III, Line 31	Tikun Olam is a political blog dedicated to the Israeli national security state. It reports on news which is often either censored or under Israeli judicial gag order. Many of these stories report on wrongdoing by Israeli political or military officials or intelligence agencies which would embarrass them if reported. Often the stories may not be reported in Israeli media at all. Thus Tikun Olam serves as an important outlet both for Israeli and foreign media who are blocked from important stories. In some cases, Tikun Olam has also reported on secret intelligence collaborations between the NSA and Israeli military intelligence. The blog also defends democratic values, free speech and free press, which are under constant attack in Israel. It offers discussion of ideas and values like BDS and Nakba, which are either criminalized or suppressed under Israel law. Tikun Olam also makes use of social media accounts to promote these ideas and the visibility of the blog. Tikun Olam has large followings on both Twitter and Facebook. Because of this presence, these accounts are often under attack from forces seeking to promote Israeli policies of Occupation and apartheid. Israeli judges and the military censor have also ordered these social media platforms to censor a number of postings which supposedly violated Israeli law. This has the effect of expanding the jurisdiction of Israeli courts far beyond the shores of Israel, which is another restriction of free speech. Funds were spent on online streaming, hosting and programming costs, and some additional equipment upgrades and maintenance

Other	The Women of Color in Leadership Movement (WCLM), was founded in 2015 and became sponsored by Media Island in 2016, within that short time we were able to accomplish much of our goals for the year that helped us build our foundational roots. We have been able to have monthly support group meetings, and support one another with shared resources, ideas, fundraising, training and organizing. WCLM has participated in various cultural events that support our communities, such as our local activists and their events. Our newly developed partnerships connects with both local and international organizations that focus on women of color and their empowerment and leadership. We have participated in workshops, cultural festivals, trainings and workshops, and have been able to send some of our members to these events. We have been able to support our members in leading their own workshops and presentations as well as supported them in their cultural artistic efforts. We have also been able to offer some support to students of the Evergreen State College, who were affected by the current racial tensions on campus, and in the community of Olympia. Our future goal is to bring more guest speakers such as bell hooks, Tim Wise, spokesperson and activist on racial issues, as well as women from our local Native tribes. These speakers would be able to address many of the issues around race, class, and gender, as well as the effects of colonization on Black and Brown peoples. We also hope to send groups of the women to conferences and workshops statewide and enable them to make international connections as well to help foster their resiliency tools.

Other	Aboriginal Lens is an independent film production company started in 2006 by Navajo filmmaker Sarah Del Seronde. We aim to create quality content for public television broadcast. Aboriginal Lens is dedicated to strengthening Native voices. We also help facilitate filmmaking workshops on American Indian reservations. The importance of our cultural background and the Navajo language cannot be understated and at the core of our projects - community based collaboration with Navajo scholars, elders, and Navajo filmmakers allow Navajo voices to be inserted into the historical and political record of American life. In 2018, MII helped to research and develop a public television media program called K'eh (Clans), a documentary film on the breakup and migration of the southern Dine from the northern Dene groups. This feature film is in the pre-production phase documenting the largest of the Athabascan linguistic groups in North America. Funds supported the media personnel, cultural historians and consultants, research costs, and travel.

Other	Lindsey Manning is an indigenous elder living on the Duck Valley Indian Reservation, which is a sovereign nation located around of what is commonly referred to as the border of Idaho & Nevada. Mr. Manning has undertaken a 3 year project to continue his scholarly work on up to 3 manuscripts or a book chronicling the history and culture of his people and the region as well as an autobiography. Mr. Manning is retired and with his wife semi-retired. Beyond their direct hours researching and writing, the grant afforded them the ability to maintain their household, cover transportation, and the purchase a writer's laptop computer, software & accessories. As the result of this grant, the project is started and well underway. They have garnered reports and reference books that assist the portrayal of their history. They have traveled locally and intend to extend to the regional resources in the coming year. They have begun Lindsey's life biography manuscript, compiled and drafted incidents, and they have begun their family history through early tribal census documents and oral histories. Work includes contemporary research on origins reviews, utilization of a local prophet for teachings on the origins of our tribes which the Uto-Aztecan theory agrees and coincides. Conflicting accounts of well written contemporary historians specific to the two tribes is being meshed into portrayal of conflict, treaties and confinement specific to Duck Valley. Mr. Manning has re-typed word-for-word (thus digitizing) 31 years of Indian Agent and Farmer in Charge, and School Superintendent reports to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs for Duck Valley Reservation and the Western Shoshone Agency, and done the same to information on the establishment of the Reservation, making it a permanent reservation for the Shoshone-Paiute. He has also compiled information on the Duck Valley Water Rights settlement and the struggles to protect sacred lands of our ancestors. His research and writing includes footnotes and bibliographies.

Other	Prison Radio's mission is to air the voices of prisoners, and in doing so, to reveal the humanity within the walls, combining investigative reporting with a large-scale public education campaign. They challenge the mainstream media to tell the truth-and the whole truth- about this nation's reliance on imprisonment for social control. Prison Radio (PR) was founded on the principle that a valid national dialogue about our modern prison system must centrally include the voices of prisoners. PR was launched in 1990 with the mission of recording and distributing the voices of those most impacted by America's (in)justice system. As the United States continues to practice imprisonment in a way never before seen in the history of the world and on a scale that surpasses any other nation, PR combats this reality by opening the airwaves to prisoners to share their testimony and connect with social movements for justice. PR built and maintains a website where audio recordings of prisoners are available for listening and download for radio stations worldwide, serving hundreds of stations and thousands of people around the world. While PR organizes an international campaign to support American political prisoner Mumia Abu-Jamal, supporting his and all prisoners' legal rights, right to decent health care, and the right to have their voices heard, their program's work is evolving in concert with dramatic new legal developments. Meanwhile, PR is at the center of a legal battle for Mumia Abu-Jamal's right to appeal his original case. The implications of his case will reverberate throughout the state of Pennsylvania as well as the rest of the country. PR is also developing the voices of prison correspondents who are typically underrepresented in our mediaD including LGBTQ prisoners, women, and immigrants in ICE detention centers. In 2018, with the help of this grant, PR worked to successfully publish another of Mumia Abu-Jamal' s books, America' s Favorite Pastime, which came out in April 2019.

Other	Midwest Two-Spirit, Trans, Womxn Action Camp (TTWAC) is a collection of TTW identifying individuals who have been fighting the proposed Line 3 oil pipeline in so-called northern Minnesota. The campaign against this project has been multifaceted. Legal intervention is being attempted by 5 of the northern Ojibwe tribes, as well as NGOs such as Honor the Earth, Friends of the Headwaters & the Sierra Club. Indigenous-led resistance on the ground has been spearheaded by Camp Makwa, a direct-action oriented frontline camp. Grassroots resistance in the Minneapolis/St. Paul area is being done by such groups as Line 3 Resistance Project, who organize trainings, reaching out to landowners, raising awareness along the route and gather information in preparation for permitting. Folks organizing TTWAC are or have been involved with these aspects of the campaign. TTWAC focuses on uplifting indigenous voices, being fiercely anti-colonial & offering a space for two-spirit, trans and women-identified folks to come together relatively free of the influence and dominance of cis-gendered men. TTWAC hopes to strengthen relationships between participants for the continued fight against Line 3, equip folks with necessary skills to resist Line 3 as well as support/uplift each other, and create a long-term encampment where folks can challenge each other and push back against forms of oppression other than patriarchy. In June & August, 2018, TTWAC held two different action camps. One focused on learning direct action skills, and the second focused more solely on climbing. Both were held on a piece of land along the proposed Line 3 route, a site chosen because its existence exercises treaty rights by occupying the land. The trainings provided strengthened the radical community by passing on skills that are not as readily available to two-spirit/trans/women folks.
