Form 990 (2019)

Form 990, Part III, Line 4a:

ZYZZYVA successfully executed its primary project of publishing the tri-quarterly print journal. In keeping with our mission since inception, our goal was to continue publishing the journal and to continue our support for writers and artists. To that end, we published three exemplary issues of the journal in 2019, featuring new works by 56 writers and substantial portfolios by 3 visual artists, in beautifully produced and carefully edited volumes which were distributed to bookstores and newsstands nationwide. We hosted or participated in 24 events to bring publicity, attention and a live audience to our authors. We continue to offer emerging talents a valuable, nationally-distributed platform (featuring fiction by 26 emerging writers in the journal over the course of the year) while also offering substantial support (through publicity, in print and online, through events, and through sustaining our increased author payments) for all our authors, emerging and established alike.

Part I Additional Information	challenging, with our organization accruing operating deficits over multiple years. Upon assuming stewardship of ZYZZYVA in 2011, Editor Laura Cogan took several steps to strengthen the journal's long-term viability and financial health, these steps were taken swiftly, but, as can be expected, their benefits take time to fully develop. To help the organization get back on its feet, several large donations were solicited in attempts to keep the organization solvent, which was successful - but such donations ultimately hurt the public support percentage necessary for public charity status. ZYZZYVA has taken vigorous steps to increase our financial health every year. We created and initiated our first year-end fundraising campaign in 2013, which led to a 20% increase in revenue that year and was even more financially successful in 2014. ZYZZYVA also launched, for the first time ever, an annual event fundraiser in 2014, which raised even more money in 2015. To help build these new programs, ZYZZYVA hired a development consultant to help develop our fundraising infrastructure and an investment necessary to give us the tools to survive and grow as an organization. We are moving to end 2020 and future years in a healthy financial position by keeping our operating costs lean and continuing to build on contributed income with the strategies we have been developing and improving since 2014. These strategies include continuing our work to increase our individual donor base, and aggressively pursuing grant opportunities including government and private foundations. To that end, in 2018 we expanded our fundraising efforts to include a second fundraiser event in the autumn, we plan to continue hosting two such events this year and going forward. Our Board of Directors, though small, is a dedicated group of accomplished professionals from all backgrounds who see the value of this vibrant and productive arts organization, and support us in their various communities. Amid all these efforts, ZYZZYVA remains steadfast in our commitment to supporting our authors by paying them well, and to playing a vibrant role in the Bay Area arts community. As the cost of living in the Bay Area puts increasing pressure on the creative community here, local organizations that support such work are essential. For these reasons, ZYZZYVA should continue to qualify as a publicly supported charity.
