Any person who feels they may have received unfair or illegal treatment at work may contact the Workers' Rights Hotline by phone, email, social media, or (pre-pandemic) walk in. Most users of the Hotline are residents of Tompkins County, NY, and the surrounding Fingerlakes and Southern Tier regions. Worker Advocates for the Hotline educate workers about their rights at work and organizing or communication skills that help users become better advocates for themselves or others, with an emphasis on building a workforce with greater self agency and knowledge of rights. The Workers' Center may act as a mediator with employers to help resolve conflicts or help workers prepare complaints to regulatory agencies when necessary. Hotline Advocates encourage concerted action between co-workers whenever possible, and may provide informational resources and help coordinate community support when workers seek to organize a union. The Hotline served approximately 350 people between 7/1/2019 - 6/30/2020/

The Living Wage Advocacy Program educates the public about costs of living and the challenge to self-sufficiency that low wage earners face without a living wage. It promotes development of a social contract that all working people deserve a livable wage in exchange for their labor. Its certified Living Wage Employer Program recognizes any enterprise that voluntarily pays all employees at least a living wage. TCWC certified seven new living wage employers between 7/1/19-6/30/20; as of 6/30/2020 127 government, non-profit and for-profit employers had earned certification. It has been engaged ongoingly in a campaign to increase the local minimum wage to a living wage.

The Community Worker Organizing Program provides resources for workers as they develop, share and exercise skills to enage in workplace concerted actions or other good faith actions to improve the terms and conditions of employment for themselves and for others. The Workers' Center seeks to empower people who wish to "renegotiate the social contract" in ways that build cultures of respect for all people and create solidarity between diverse communities to affirm each others' dignity, civil rights, and right to respect and reasonable compensation in exchange for their labor. Although our space has been closed to the public during the Covid-19 pandemic and strict safety guidelines enforced for staff/sub-lessors who have needed to come into the office when unable to work remotely, when open, the Workers' Center physical offices are a shared group work space for several small non-profits and social justice oriented associations as well as a meeting space for others interested in creating a more just society. The Workers' Center also works with local and regional labor unions to promote community awareness of workers' right to democratic determination around collective bargaining and to influence employers to respect union members' rights. The "Community Union Organizers" are a self-directed collective of workers within the Center who meet regularly to discuss their experiences at work and proactive organizing solutions that can transform circumstances for the better.

Tompkins County Workers' Center serves as the fiscal sponsor for the listed organizations, both of which are registered in NYS as charitable organizations. TCWC receives donations on behalf of each organization. We maintain separate savings accounts to hold the money and separate restricted income and expense accounts in our financial records in order to track the funds while in our possession. The organizations may request available funds on a monthly basis by submitting a request in writing indicating the amount requested and the purposes for which the funds will be used. If any donor has indicated a restriction beyond general operations or "where it's most needed," we communicate such restrictions to the organizations and they are responsible for ensuring the donor's wishes are adhered to. Organizations must submit an annual report detailing the grant funds received, how the funds were expensed, and noting if funds were donor restricted. TCWC staff reviews these reports to ensure that the funds are spent in accordance with the stated purposes and in compliance with charitable regulations.
