Native Voices Rising (NVR): In collaboration with the Common Counsel Foundation, Native Americans in Philanthropy supported over 50 Native-led non-profit organizations. We brought together the NVR grantees and #GenI grantees as a cohort to participate in a four part capacity building webinar series using key components from our Art of Reciprocity curriculum. Narrative: Native Americans in Philanthropy (NAP) seeks to change mainstream narratives of Native Americans dominated by harmful stereotypes and racist depictions through centering Native leaders and voices, supported by a cross-cultural network of influencers who leverage their own visibility and platforms to spread indigenous people's messages and advocate for our priorities. We emphasize that Native issues and communities are intertwined with everyone's and that change does include national reckoning with a history of colonization and genocide within a frame of truth, healing and reconciliation. In this spirit, NAP recognizes that truth-telling from an indigenous perspective empowers Native communities and re-centers our voices, and that non-Natives also need to feel empowered to become allies and partners. We have been targeting the philanthropic sector to deepen the cultural competence of philanthropic organizations in order to further strategic grantmaking and an opportunity to learn how to close the resource gap empowered with understanding of the inner workings of philanthropy and an indigenized model of reciprocal giving, receiving and sharing through our Truth and Healing Movement. NAP in collaboration with close philanthropic and advocacy partners created a Native Vote video to engage Indian Country about the importance of civic engagement. NAP also supported the Native Power Building Summit which was a historic event that brought together Native people to learn about movement building, strategy, and ways to support those who will be the voices for our communities. It was a precursor to the largest number of Native American women being elected in state and federal offices.

Regional Summit:Native Americans in Philanthropy held its 30th Anniversary Celebration & Regional Summit in Chicago, IL in September 2019. This signature event hosted supporters, allies, and Native leaders across geographies, sectors, and cultural communities. During this important time of learning, we shared learned experiences and celebrated the longevity and hard work of NAP throughout the years. The Summit gave us time to hear from Native leaders from across Indian Country about the important work that is happening to affect positive change and healing in our communities and the ways in which organizations and professionals in philanthropy can support the growth of this good work.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4b:

Web Portal: NAP partnered with Candid, formerly Foundation Center and GuideStar, to develop a multi-content web portal housing rich information about philanthropic funding related to and for Native Americans. The portal is populated with grants data, news stories, research, funder insights, educational content, and other information that enables users to determine what funding to Native people and issues currently looks like, research best practices in inclusive and strategic grantmaking rooted in Native values, and learn about Native history and issues as critical context for decision-making. It also give us funding data related to trends over time which is critical information to our field. The portal was launched in September 2019.

Form 990, Part III, Line 4c:
