1. INDIGENOUS CONCEPTS - $ 30,400.00 (Line 28) - (www.facebook.com/louise.benally.94)

This has been a very different year from all of the times we have existed on this planet. Back in the 1980's we were warned of a time coming of change that there would be a shortage of water and the natural environment would start to change for the worst and that time is now here! In this time we are engaged by using Traditional Knowledge to counter this pandemic, which we were not ready for at all. Back in november of 2020 a cough like flu came around it spread fast and there was no known treatment for it the doctors at local hospitals just send people home and to treat it like a upper respiratory infection, most people started to suffer more than others some of the traditional Dineh remedies were starting to be applied by the ones that knew of herbs. Until January it was confirmed by the center for diseases control that a virus was starting to spread into the country. While we here was already experiencing the struggling for air and coughing with strong body aches by march people have started to fall ill that were also starting to die and the numbers kept going up, our local school employees were some of the first to catch this virus and we lost a school teacher that was still young the school employees were forced to work regardless until sometime later when the whole reservation was shut down and it's been a year ago now and still. Shut down, the Navajo Nation Government just reopened as of this week since last year. Our reservation has become a hotspot for majority of the time until now in the meantime ICC has been able to assist with some support for communities through partnership with other service providers by doing supplies drives and distribution of cleaning supplies, homemade herbal remedies, vitamins, some home health education support services, mask distribution, and large water tanks for homes that need water for cleaning and cooking also, we were able to haul water for for growing food in a desert region with no rainfall throughout the summer and fall, food production was hard with no rain, no bees to pollinators and we are in serious trouble. In these events we have been able to work in partnership with other on land supporters, Tao fund, Navajo-Hopi relief organization, Indigenous Environmental Network, Spirit of the Sun Foundation, Dr. Melissa Tohlakal Australian naturopathy/homeopathist, Doctor Joseph and Clairbeth Loprinzi - Hawaiian medical/ herbal Doctors, Herbalist Dixie Pauline Block, Nizhoni Foundation supplies drive, and a few private contributors to help cover some of the costs.

As of now 16,336 recoveries and 30,014 active cases as we are making this report.

$ 7,000.00 transportation, food and supply deliveries, gas, auto parts etc.

$ 7,000.00 supplies deliveries, water tanks, essential supplies.

2. RISING TIDE NORTH AMERICA - $30,907.00 (Line 29)

www.risingtidenorthamerica.org

In 2020, Rising Tide North America's work shrunk somewhat due to the pandemic, but we continued to support a variety of frontline struggles against climate change and other injustices.

From January through April the Wet'suwet'en Nation in Canada made public their opposition to the coastal gas link pipeline in many different ways. We supported them by highlighting the links to Private Equity, including working with organizations like PESTakeholder and United for Respect to bring indigenous leaders and their demands into conversation with the giant private equity fund KKR.

We also mobilized solidarity actions in a variety of ways. Members of Rising Tide were key to mutual aid networks during the summer.

Members of Rising Tide helped organize to support the summer uprising. Some of us used our platform to organize a national jail call. Others joined the Movement for Black Lives in working with groups on the ground in Tulsa, Oklahoma for Juneteenth celebrations and actions. Rising Tide members were universally involved in protecting the integrity of our elections by organizing action councils that protected the integrity of the vote and the vote-counting. Rising Tide Collective members were key to the organizing of the dance party at the Convention Center in Philly, the work in St. Louis, and ensuring that social media companies protected election results in the Bay Area. Rising Tide also provided direct assistance to indigenous groups leading campaigns against extraction throughout 2020.

A good chunk of money went to indigenous led leadership pushing back against Line 3 in Northern Minnesota for technical support and camp set-up, supporting the longest tree-sit east of the Mississippi to obstruct the Mountain Valley Pipeline, and supporting trainings around forest defense in Northern California. Of Rising Tide's 501(c)(3) eligible budget, about 25% went to meetings and convenings, 25% went to our email list and other tech, and 50% to migrants for actions, containers and trainers.

3. PORTLAND RISING TIDE - $1,500.00 (Line 30)

In 2020, Portland Rising Tide (PRT) engaged in three main areas of work: community education and training, mutual aid and training, mutual aid and community defense. In an effort to provide learning opportunities around various political issues, Portland Rising Tide began a series of online webinars called Community Study Sessions. Each session introduced a topic, provided historical context and examples, and discussed the issue within a current political context. Discussion questions and break-out groups were included in sessions to foster conversation and engagement with the content. Topics included State Repression and the History of the Police. In addition to Community Study Sessions, PRT also organized online and in-person trainings (covid-safe, outside during the Summer) on various topics including How to Form an Affinity Group, Direct Action 101, Know Your Rights, and Digital Security Best Practices. With the pandemic and wildfires, much of PRT's time and resources were dedicated to mutual aid in 2020. We have supported (and continue to support) several local mutual aid projects in the Portland area, including donation/supply collection and transportation for those displaced by fires and donation/supply collection and distribution to immigrant families. PRT also organized PPE distribution (masks and respirators) to Portland community members, prioritizing BIPOC folks, folks, throughout the George Floyd much of the Portland community responded by getting in the streets. The local Black Lives Matter movement was invigorated by many newly activated individuals, as well as a unification of groups groups that work in different, but related areas. PRT dedicated time and resources (supplies, money, etc.) to support local Black individuals and groups in various actions and events. We also joined in community efforts like jail support and supply donation in response to the intense federal law enforcement presence in the city.

4. THE WOMEN OF COLOR IN LEADERSHIP MOVEMENT - www.thewomenofcolorinleadershipmovement.com

The Women of Color in Leadership Movement (WCLM), was founded in 2015 and became sponsored by Media Island in 2016, within that short time we were able to accomplish much of our goals for the year that helped us build our foundational roots. We have been able to have monthly support group meetings, and support one another with shared resources, ideas, fundraising, training and organizing. WCLM has participated in various cultural events that support our communities, such as our local activists and their events. Our newly developed partnerships connects with both local and international organizations that focus on women of color and their empowerment and leadership. We have participated in workshops, cultural festivals, trainings and workshops, and have been able to send some of our members to these events. We have been able to support our members in leading their own workshops and presentations as well as supported them in their cultural artistic efforts. We have also been able to offer some support to students of the Evergreen State College, who were affected by the current racial tensions on campus, and in the community of Olympia. Our future goal is to bring more guest speakers such as bell hooks, Tim Wise, spokesperson and activist on racial issues, as well as women from our local Native tribes. These speakers would be able to address many of the issues around race, class, and gender, as well as the effects of colonization on Black and Brown peoples. We also hope to send group of the women to conferences and workshops statewide and to able to make international connections as well to help foster their resiliency tools.
